It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

HOW THIS BOOK CAME TO BE WRITTEN, AND ITS HISTORY.

7:10:00
12:50
Fifty years since—in the fall of 1823, Gideon Leavenworth, the son of Thomas, and great grand son of Thomas, of Woodbury, the common progenitor, probably, of all the Leavenworths on this continent, made a visit at the residence of his nephew, Dr. David Leavenworth, in the village of Great Barrington, Mass. Gideon L. was then residing at New Marlborough, Mass., and the author was at home from College, spending his fall vacation. I had never before had the pleasure to meet him. It was soon apparent that the old gentleman was an intelligent, kind hearted and genial person, and quite fully informed in regard to the various members of the family. Indeed his tastes ran very strongly in that direction, and before the expiration of his visit, the author and his brother, the late William L., of Allentown, New Jersey, had obtained from him a very general genealogy of the family, beginning with his grand father, Dr. Thomas, or as he was indifferently called, Deacon Thomas, of Stratford, Ripton Parish, Connecticut, (now town of Huntington,) and extending down to the time of such visit. And in those cases where his knowledge was defective, he furnished the addresses of members of the family, who could supply the deficiencies. The stock of information thus obtained was subsequently somewhat enlarged and perfected by correspondence with various members of the family—which at that time was mainly confined to the States of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont and New York. This work was principally done previous to the year 1828, but was allowed to remain unimproved until the year 1840. In that year it was embodied in the form of a Genealogical Tree. The brother of the author caused it to be lithographed, and some fifty impressions, more or less, were struck from the plate, when, unfortunately, it was broken and rendered useless. The few copies thus obtained were given away to the members of the family who had most interested themselves in procuring the facts which were embraced in them, and the whole of them were soon disposed of.

The information contained in this Tree was obtained entirely from the said

Gideon, and from the correspondence with other members of the family. There was no examination of Grave Stones, none of Church, Town, Probate or other records. It was such a work as two young men—the one in College, and the other engaged in mercantile and manufacturing business—might be expected to produce in their leisure hours. And yet it embraced nearly all the male members of the family down to the last generation of that day.

The Tree contained some serious errors, but more omissions. Gideon supposed his grandfather, Thomas, to have been one of three original immigrants, who came over about 1690, Thomas, Edmund and David, whereas, Thomas, of Woodbury, and his wife Grace, and his brother John, were the original immigrants: they possibly brought with them the two sons of Thomas, Thomas and John, though it is more probable that they were born here. But there is one gross error in the Tree which cannot be charged to Gideon. It is the making of Edmund, instead of Dr. Thomas, the grand father of Gideon, for, as Gideon was born some years previous to the death of his grand father, Dr. Thomas, and in his early life lived in Woodbury and Waterbury, he must have been well informed in regard to him. This was doubtless an error of our own, in writing down the facts or in copying them. He was also mistaken in regard to the time of the immigration to this country, which he supposed to have been about 1690, but which was probably after 1664, and certainly some years before 1683, in which year Thomas, of Woodbury, our first common ancestor, died. There were also other minor errors and omissions.

A desire to correct the errors of said Tree, to supply its deficiencies, and to bring the genealogy of the entire family down to more recent times, often flitted through my mind, and seemed, in advance, to involve the expenditure of but little labor and time. But the pressure of a multitude of public and private duties, ever devolving upon me, deferred the undertaking until the year 1864; when, not doubting that I had before me the labor of a few months, or perhaps, of a year, I embarked in this ten year enterprise.

After writing a large number of letters, and ascertaining many new and important facts, finding the work growing on my hands and far from being finished, and my time yearly more and more engrossed by other duties, I caused a circular to be printed in the year 1865, a copy of which will be found in the Appendix, marked, Letter A. Many hundreds of these were issued during the next five years, and yet the work was not complete. New families were discovered yearly, and the facts in relation to the old families were by no means exhausted.

Finding my work so far from its completion, so much labor still remaining to be done; finding so many neglecting even to answer my letters, so many others answering only to promise for the future, then never performing; finding others destitute of all family pride and interest in the subject, and others still, quite impatient because the work was so long delayed, and having made great progress in the work and obtained some interesting facts in regard to the family, I caused another circular to be printed in the year 1870, and have been issuing it constantly, from that time to the present. This was written to endeavor to awaken a deeper interest in the family generally, and to encourage those who were impatient at the long delay, and to communicate some facts to those who took an interest in my undertaking. A copy of this circular will also be found in the Appendix, Letter B.

The work is now far from being complete. It never can be made perfect by any amount of time, labor or expense. Very many facts are gone beyond recovery, buried with the years before the flood; other facts can only be had by personal visitation, and perhaps not even then, and others still by an examination of Church, Town, County and Probate records, and the head stones and monuments of our ancestors. All of this has been largely done, and the genealogy and general history of the family is, perhaps, as nearly complete as is usual in similar works, or at least, as could be hoped for from one whose labors never end, and whose time is always too short for his duties.

Unfortunately the Parish records of the Congregational Church in Ripton, (of which the second Thomas was a deacon and one of the founders,) during the long ministry of its first pastor, Mr. Mills, are lost and nothing remains prior to 1773, except a few scattered entries of names of original members of the church, and some notes of church and society meetings. This I learn from the Rev. B. L. Swan, late of Stratford.

This would, beyond doubt, have furnished a large number of interesting facts, now forever lost, unless it may yet be found in the hands of some of his descendants.

But there are many isolated facts which might yet be gathered up, and no doubt there are many errors, which will be discovered, in branches of the family where I have depended entirely upon the information of others, and perhaps other errors. These errors always exist and always will in works of this kind. They arise from a very great variety of causes, largely from defects of memory and information, from mistakes in the original entries where the facts are preserved, from mistakes in copying such entries, and more often still from the impossibility of correctly reading many words, and far more, figures. Hundreds of such have been corrected and yet many more will no doubt be still found. But is it too much to hope, that in long years to come, when all of us who are now upon the stage shall have been summoned home by our Heavenly Father, the leisure, the industry, the perseverance and care of some future scion of the blood, will revise this imperfect work, correct all its errors, enlarge its bounds, perfect its plan, and enlighten other generations yet unborn with a more perfect history of the pious and worthy ancestors from whom they have descended?

This work can possess very little interest for any persons except the descendants of our common progenitors; and it is for them that I have particularly designed it. It embraces all that I know or have been able to learn of the family. It contains, perhaps, more of biography than genealogies usually do, but far, far less than it would have done had it been in my power to obtain the necessary statistics of our ancestors, or had my own knowledge enabled me to write them. For, as the book has been written mainly for the members of the family, I think it highly desirable that they should be made as fully acquainted as possible with their ancestors and one another. But unfortunately my own acquaintance with the members of the family extends but slightly beyond my own immediate relatives—my uncles and my cousins, and I have no personal acquaintance with a dozen families beyond that narrow circle. Having spent all the active part of my life in Central New York, far from the homes of the great body of the family, and having known little of leisure at any period, I have had no time or opportunity to cultivate the acquaintance of its various members; nor have I, during the ten years in which I have been engaged on the work, been able to make but few visits for the purpose of gleaning new facts and extending my acquaintance.

Not doubting, however, that during the fifty years in which I have given more or less attention to the genealogy of the family, I have become possessed of more information in regard to it than is possessed by any other one of its name, I have felt it to be a duty which I owed its members, to embody, arrange, impart and preserve this knowledge and information. I have been far more solicitous in regard to the preservation of the facts, than in regard to the phraseology in which they are clothed. It will, I trust, be borne in mind that the work has been written and arranged only in the fragments of time which could be obtained while all the time occupying various positions of grave responsibility, and involving labor and care abundantly sufficient for the most robust health, and the most untiring industry. I think I have never devoted an entire day to the work except when sometimes I could seize upon a passing holiday, or at others, as now, find a day or two when too unwell for business, but able to sit in my room at home and write. I trust, therefore, that my readers will not look for classical elegance, nor criticise too closely the phraseology made use of or the order in which the facts in regard to each member of the family may be found. No very uniform arrangement will be discovered. While commencing the work with a systematic plan, I have very often been compelled to depart from it in consequence of obtaining new facts year after year relating to the same person, and inserting them out of their regular order. In very many instances when the facts have become complicated and perhaps confused, I have re-written the entire sketch of a member; but more frequently, for want of time, I have inserted the additional facts in such order only as was most convenient.

Without further explanation or apology, I commit the work into the hands of those for whom it was written. I regret its imperfections, and I am, without doubt, far more conscious of them than any of those who may hereafter look at them with a critical eye. Whoever shall in the future undertake to correct them, publishing another edition, and bringing the genealogy down to his time, will be the most ready to excuse all and every omission and other imperfection.

I regret that I have been unable to obtain engravings of some of the prominent members of the family, and particularly of the older members, now in their graves; but in their day, photography was unknown, and portrait painting in the country, almost equally so. Their features are lost in their graves, and their memories are fast passing into forgetfulness, feebly preserved to a slight extent by this labor of love and duty.

But if this work shall be the means of diffusing among the different branches of the family a more perfect knowledge of their kindred, if it shall acquaint them more perfectly with the virtues of their ancestors, and more particularly if it shall stimulate the young men of the present generation and those to follow them, to imitate their good examples and to strive for still higher attainments in learning, virtue, and goodness, I shall be satisfied with my labor, be compensated for the time spent in them, and feel an increased pleasure and pride in being the member of a family which has borne itself honor during the two hundred years of its existence this side of the Atlantic, which has done and is still doing something for its own honor and for the good of the world.

The history of Woodbury, by Wm. Cothren, Esq., now in two volumes, the history of Waterbury by Dr. Henry Bronson, which are model works of the kind, have been of much service to me, and I have not hesitated to draw upon them for any facts and sketches which would give interest to this volume; to those of my readers who do not already possess them, I take pleasure in recommending them as worthy of their perusal, and of a permanent place in their libraries.

But I must not forget before taking leave of the reader, to return my sincere thanks to all those persons, both gentlemen and ladies, who have assisted me in this protracted and almost interminable labor. They are especially due to the Hon. Green Kendrick, and the Hon. F. J. Kingsbury, of Waterbury; the Hon. Truman Smith, of Stamford, and the Rev. B. W. Swan, late of Stratford who kindly furnished me with all that appears relating to the family on parish and town records of Stratford, and the probate records at Fairfield dated 1650 to 1759. To Mr. Kingsbury I am particularly indebted for sketches of various members of the family which are acknowledged in the body of the work.

I am also greatly indebted to Wm. Cothren, Esq., of Woodbury, who has now finished the second volume of his invaluable and most elaborate history of that town, for a very careful and exhaustive examination of the town records of Woodbury down to 1729; of the probate records of Woodbury district from its organization in 1719 till the year 1871; of the grave yards at Bantam, Litchfield and the old yard near "Ruccum" in Roxbury, and the new graveyard there; the north burial ground in Woodbury, and of those at Ripton and the White Mills in the town Huntington, and for all the valuable facts which could be derived from them.

John H. Leavenworth, Esq., of Roxbury, Dr. D. C. Leavenworth, of New Haven, Lorenzo W. Leavenworth, Esq., of Bridgeport, and Eli Leavenworth, Esq., of Stepney, have obliged me greatly by their contributions; and I am also under special obligations to Charles J. Hoadley, Esq., Librarian of State Library at Hartford, for his kind and prompt attention to every request for information.

I have also received material aid from Miss Mary Ann Leavenworth of Westport, the late Mrs. Green Kendrick, of Waterbury, the late Mrs. Pierre Mundry, of Bridgeport, daughter of LeGrand Leavenworth, Mrs. Eliza A. Wheeler, of Southford, daughter of Calvin Leavenworth, and especially from Mrs. Jane R. Shelton, of Huntington, who has been indefatigable in searching out every kind of information in relation to the family, and particularly relating to her great grand father, Edmund Leavenworth, the son of Deacon Thomas, of Ripton, and in relation to his descendants.

All the parties above referred to, reside in the State of Connecticut.

I have also received material aid from Mrs. Robert L. Wilson, of Hinesburgh, Vt., daughter of the late General Nathan Leavenworth, of that town, and from Henry Clay Leavenworth, of Charlotte, Vt., and especially from Abel Edwin Leavenworth, of New Haven, Vt., formerly of Hinesburgh, and from the Hon. George C. Cahoon, of Wheelock, in the same State.

Many thanks are due to Treat M. Leavenworth, of Galway, N. Y., and to his son Edwin, of Amsterdam, and not less to the late Ebenezer Leavenworth, Gloversville, Mrs. Charlotte L. Brown, of Honeoye Falls, daughter of the late John Peck Leavenworth, of Rush, N. Y., to Horace Leavenworth, of East Genoa, N. Y., and to Mrs. Mary Boughton, of Nassau, N. Y., daughter of David Leavenworth, deceased, of that place,

The late Hon. Zebulon Leavenworth, of Leavenworth, Ind., Ebenezer Leavenworth, of Dongola, Ill., the late John W. Leavenworth, of St. Louis, Mo., and his brother Mark, late of the same city, Mrs. Sally M. Langdon, of Solon, Iowa, daughter of Jehiel Leavenworth, Isaac H. Leavenworth, of East Saginaw, Michigan, and particularly Edmund Leavenworth, of Ann Arbor, in the same State, Alson E. Leavenworth, of Chicago, and his mother Sally Leavenworth, widow of the late Judge Alson Leavenworth, of Cattaraugus, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., the late Rev. Abner J. Leavenworth, of Petersburg, Va., and the Hon. Mark Leavenworth, of San Jose, Cal., have all kindly assisted me in various ways during my protracted labors.

To the multitude of others who have furnished me with the facts in regard to their own families, who are too numerous to be mentioned here, I feel my obligations and I return my thanks; and to each and all of the above I would say, that I both hope and expect that when the work shall finally reach their hands, they will find it a satisfactory return for all their labor and kindness, even with all its errors and other imperfections.

Thankful to a kind Providence which has permitted me to reach the end of these labors—thankful that He has spared my life till it has now reached its seventieth year—that he has given me health and strength for the last ten years to devote to this interesting object—thankful for the extensive acquaintance which I have been enabled, mostly however, by correspondence, to make with so many of my relations scattered over the union, and warned by impaired health and the flight of years, of the approaching close of the specified period allotted to man, I bring my imperfect labor to a final end, with many thanks for your kind attention to my numerous and often my persistent requests, and with the kindest wishes for your welfare both in the world that now is and in that which shall be hereafter.

Dated at Clifton Springs, where I am detained by one of the warnings which a kind Father sends down to remind us of our mortality, this 31st day of May, 1873.

E. W. LEAVENWORTH, of Syracuse, N. Y.

NOTE.—After all the attention which I have been able to devote to this subject, there are still a few names which cannot be connected with any of the families herein, and as there is no doubt of their descent from Thomas Leavenworth, of Woodbury, they will be found in the appendix, (Letter C.)

2. In the course of the investigations growing out of this work, the books mentioned in the appendix, Letter G, have been examined in quest of facts illustrating the family, and giving its history. The other examinations therein mentioned have also been made.

HISTORY OF THE FAMILY.

OF ENGLISH DESCENT.

There can be no doubt that the family of which the genealogy will be in this volume, came to this country from England, between the years 1664 and 1680, and probably between 1664 and 1675. No data have been discovered by which the precise year can be determined.

Hinman's catalogue of early names etc., Hartford, 1852-56, does not reach lower than the letter (c), except for Hinman.

The volumes published by the New Haven Historical Society, containing records of the colony from the settlement in 1638 only down to 1665, when the New Haven and Connecticut colonies were united.

It is by no means certain that the name now exists in England, nor does it seem probable that it was ever very common there.

I have had the directories of most of the large cities of England carefully searched for the name at two different times without success, and have had extensive inquiries made for it in different parts of the Island with the same

In the hope of finding the name at some earlier day, I have caused searches to be made of the indices to the wills at Drs. Commons, of the church proceedings for the north, and of the indices for wills at York for a hundred years. The same in Surrey, Westminster, and Middlesex; at the church of St. Clare, and at other churches in Southwark, and have caused postulates to be sent to all the old parish churches in London, where all the Leveses yet found in England had their residences. These efforts have not been crowned with all the success which might have been anticipated and but they were not without important results. It appears upon a tax the parish of St. Clare, Southwark, London, that Thomas and Edward Leavenworth were each assessed for a hearth tax in that parish, in the year 1664. There was also found at the Faculty Office, London, the marriage license of Peter Leavenworth and Sarah Wood, dated June 11th, 1729. These are the only traces of the name in England which all these inquiries and searches have brought to light. It appears, however, in Russell's life of Sir Gerald Massey, in his Lives of eccentric personages, at page 96, that one Sir Lewis Leavenworth, was living in London about the year 1750, (but the year is not closely defined), but of whom I have learned nothing beyond what is stated by Russell.

This is abundant proof that the family was in England, and was there before or about the time of the emigration of the first Thomas Leavenworth to this country.

Indeed it is quite probable that the Thomas Leavenworth, of Southwark, in 1664, and the Thomas Leavenworth of Woodbury, who died there in 1683, the common ancestor of the family, are one and the same person. For in confirmation of this supposition it may be remarked that on the 11th day of June, 1684, after the death of her husband, Grace Leavenworth, the widow of the said Thomas, executed two several bonds with great formality, under her hand and each attested by her coat of arms, the one to George Musgrave of London, and witnessed by Lawr. Hammond, Fran Burroughs, John Leavenworth and Benjamin Bullivant; the other to Mary Gawthorn of London, and witnessed by the same persons, except the said John Leavenworth. These bonds are now in the State Library, at Hartford. From these bonds it is quite evident that the said Thomas, had dealings with and relations of some kind to people in London, which might naturally grow out of his former residence there, and which would not be probable upon any other supposition.

I come, therefore, not only to the conclusion above, but also to the commonly received opinion that the said Thomas came over soon after the restoration of Charles the second, a period when many dissenters and republicans found it both convenient and safe to leave their country to escape the dangers and persecution of those unhappy times.

WHERE THEY LANDED.

Tradition has been quite uniform in saying that he landed at New Haven, and settled soon after at Woodbury. Unfortunately the two volumes of the records of the New Haven colony only come down to the year 1665, and all the records since that time are lost. Had they been preserved, they would probably show the date of the arrival of Thomas and his brother John. But the town of Woodbury was not settled till after 1670, nor was it constituted a town, till 1674.

FINANCIAL CONDITION.

What his condition as to property was at that time does not appear, but it is abundantly evident that he became a very large land owner before his death in 1683. For it appears by entries in an old account book of Joseph Boothe, of Stratford, a relative of Wm. A. Boothe, of New York, that Thomas Leavenworth, a son of the first Thomas, was living in Stratford, and dealing with the said Boothe from 1695 till 1702. He must, therefore, have left Woodbury when but twenty-two years of age, and before he could himself have acquired any considerable amount of property: and if he had acquired any before leaving Woodbury, it would probably not have been real estate. But it appears most abundantly by the first half dozen volumes of Woodbury town records, that early in life, and soon after 1700, he was the owner of many pieces of land or farms in the town of Woodbury which he would not have bought, living in Stratford, but which he must have derived by inheritance from his father and his Uncle John. He became however, also the owner of all the lands which his brother John received from his father Thomas, and his Uncle John. (Book 20, p. 130, date, Sept. 11, 1705.)

He deeded lands in Woodbury, to nearly all his children, (see book 3, p. 170, date, Apr. 9, 1725; book 4, p. 164 and 165, in Dec., 1733; book 5, p. 139, Oct. 10, 1735; book 6, p. 50, May 16, 1739; book 7, p. 85, Dec. 4, 1744; and several pieces to some of them.

He deeded lands at Good Hill, (book 4, p. 164-165; book 5, p. 39; at Transylvania, Aug., 1707, and also at Ruccum). Good Hill is in the west part of the town of Woodbury. Grassey Hill lies south of it. Ruccum lies southwest of Good Hill, in Roxbury; and from the early settlement of the country has been a Leavenworth neighborhood.

In addition to the above, it may be noticed that, by his will, Dr. Thomas, in addition to his lands in Stratford, left other lands still, in Woodbury, to his widow, and several of his sons.

All of these lands he no doubt received from his father, and his Uncle John, except so far as he acquired some from his brother John by the deed of Sept. 11, 1705; and these lands were such only as his brother John had received from his father, and Uncle.

It is quite probable, therefore, that the first Thomas brought with him from England the means of establishing himself comfortably here, on his arrival.

It might seem singular that there is no record of a single deed in the town records of Woodbury, to the first Thomas L., or to his brother John; and it would be quite inexplicable but for the fact that the first volume of the Acts of the proprietor's, and also of the records of the town of Woodbury, are lost; and the town was created in 1674, nine years previous to the death of said Thomas, a period, most of which was embraced no doubt in said first volume of town records and proprietors' acts. That Thomas and John were original proprietors of the town, appears at page 61, of volume first, of Cothren's Woodbury.

It should be noticed, also, that a deed from Grace Leavenworth to her sons, Thomas and John, dated May 26, 1687, is recorded in book 1, page 45, of the Woodbury records. This shows that the early deeds, previous to the death of her husband in 1683, must have been recorded in the lost volume.

The conveyances for the land which Thomas and John acquired as original proprietors, were no doubt recorded in the volume of the acts of the proprietors, now lost.

COAT OF ARMS.

From the fact that the bonds above referred to were attested by the coat of arms of the said Grace Leavenworth, it would seem that they were persons of some position and standing, in England. The existence of this coat of arms was known to some of the older members of the family, particularly to Miss Mary Ann Leavenworth, of Westport, and Mrs. David Shelton, of Huntington, the grand-daughters of the second Edmund Leavenworth, who had often seen it painted on the walls or wainscoting over the mantel in the homes of Edmund and Gideon Leavenworth, about two miles above Birmingham. The home of Edmund was taken down a generation since. That of Gideon has passed into other hands, and the arms have been obliterated by a coat of paint. They were supposed, therefore, to be lost forever, the impressions attached to the said two bonds having been stolen from the state library, between 1842 and 1856; but, fortunately, in 1870, Lorenzo W. Leavenworth, Esq., of Bridgeport, in the course of his inquiries and investigations in relation to the family, found in the hands of an old lady of eighty years, Mrs. Fanny Thompson, of Bridgeport, a descendant of Edmund Leavenworth, a very ancient copper plate, upon which was engraved a coat of arms. It was evidently executed for the benefit of Capt. Gideon Leavenworth, who was so unwise as to have the motto left out and in its place to substitute his own name. This plate was uneven, battered and worn. I caused it to be engraved anew, and sent one of the impressions to Mrs. Shelton, and one to Miss Leavenworth, who each recognized it as identical with those in the homes of Capt. Gideon and his father Edmund, on the bank of the Hoosatic, above Birmingham. There was a blunder made, however, in the execution of this old plate, which was doubtless made from an impression. The animals—lions—are made to look the wrong way, for in heraldry, they are never drawn looking to the right. The crest, for the same reason was wrongly posed; for these reasons, I have caused the plate to be re-engraved and these errors corrected, and omitting the name of Capt. Gideon, have substituted a motto in the room of that which has been lost.

Whether this is the same coat of arms with that of Sir Lewis Leavenworth, I have not been able to ascertain.

RESIDENCE OF THE FIRST THOMAS.

The exact spot where the first Thomas L. settled, is undoubtedly at the north end of Good Hill. It was for a long time a matter of serious doubt; but it appears by a deed, dated the 23d day of March, 1729, 3d vol., p. 18, of Woodbury records, that Dr. Thomas had land added to his homestead at the north end of Good Hill. Now, as Dr. Thomas never lived in Woodbury after 1695, nor after he was twenty-two years of age, nor after his marriage, he never had any homestead there except that which he enjoyed under his father's roof. The north end of Good Hill was then the home of the first Thomas Leavenworth; and Mr. Colgren who has carefully examined this record and who is familiar with the locality, says that this is the modern John Leavenworth's place, as he believes. That Thomas L., the son, lived in Woodbury until 1795, appears in book 2 of W. records, page 132.

GENERAL CHARACTER.

Of the character of the family, there is little to be said that cannot with truth be said of most of the good and early families of New England. They brought with them the pure and rigid principles, and the stern and unyielding spirit which had characterized the Puritans of England for a century previous, which survived the inhuman persecutions of the bloody Mary and the tyrannical and stubborn and bigoted Elizabeth, and her blind and stupid successors, and which found their congenial home among the Puritans of New England. And therefore, that Dr. Thomas was received into the communion of the Stratford Church, on the 6th day of February, 1697-8, having "owned the covenant" on the 11th day of the previous January, and in his 24th year. He was one of the members and founders of the Ripton Church, and his wife also joined with him together with his children, James, Ebenezer, Mark, Mary and Hannah the year soon after. It appears also by the Parish records of the Huntington Church that he was one of the deacons in 1726 and probably from the beginning. His son Ebenezer was "collector of Parish rates" in 1727; and his son James was Parish officer in 1736. His son Mark who was educated at Yale, was 58 years of age the minister at Waterbury; and the younger sons, David, Thomas and Zebulon, who settled in Woodbury, became members of the church there. Such was the religious character of Dr. Thomas and his family; and that character so early and so strongly impressed upon the family, has been largely handed down through the successive generations to the present time. The family has furnished about the usual proportion of clergymen, lawyers and physicians, merchants and manufacturers, while the bulk of the family have followed the occupation of their first ancestors, and devoted their lives to agriculture.

The family are not distinguished by remarkable wit, brilliancy of genius, but they possess in a high degree the more solid, practical and valuable traits of character. They are not wanting in enterprise, energy, public spirit, and that strong vigorous common sense which is the great lever which moves the world; and a large number of them have been the early pioneers in various parts of the country.

The third Thomas was before the Revolution one of the early pioneers in the valley of Wyoming, and was driven out with his family houseless and homeless by Col. John Butler and his tory and Indian allies. Col. Jesse, the father of the Rev. Mark, was not only one of the patentees of the town of Danville and Peacham, in Caledonia County, Vt., but was one of the very able and most enterprising of the early settlers in Danville, going there in 1734, building mills, etc., and often representing the town in the legislature. (The fourth Thomas, Nathan L., the son of Nathan and grandson of Dr. David, of Woodbury, with his father a pioneer in Hinesburgh, Vt., while Dorman and Abel the sons of the third Thomas, were also pioneers in the adjoining town of Charlotte, where they were afterwards joined by their brother the fourth Thomas. Their scendants still remain in these two towns, and have spread into adjoining parts of the state. For more than forty years Gen. Nathan was a prominent man in Vermont, having represented the town of Hinesburgh more than twenty years, and having held the office of Senator, Presidential Elector and member of the Governor's Council.

Lemuel L., the son of John, was one of the earliest settlers at Whitesboro, having moved there with his large family the next year after Judge White in 1785; and he was followed by his half-brother Amos, who came with his large family in 1794, and settled on the north bank of the Mohawk, in the town of Deerfield, now the town of Marcy; and his son Ralph as early as 1818 crossed the Mississippi and settled permanently at St. Genevieve. And another son of the third Thomas, with his family settled at New Canaan, Col., Co., in 1796, and this son John was one of the early settlers of Genoa, in the county of Cayuga, where he spent his life and died in 1851. Seth M., and Zebulon, the grandsons of the first Zebulon were the owners and founders of the village of Leavenworth, on the Ohio, the capital of Crawford Co., Ind., to which they gave their name. There they settled in the year 1819, at the mouth of the Big Blue, having purchased the land from the Government. Zebulon died there in the year 1872, and his surviving sons still remain there. Gen. Henry L., the grandson of Mark, having won distinguished laurels in the battles of Chippeway and Niagara in the war 1812, was some years after placed in command of the troops on the western frontiers, and built Cantonment Leavenworth on the Missouri, and gave his name to the most important town on that celebrated River.

This account might be much farther extended by allusions to those who in more modern times have settled in the still newer western states, and to those who at an early day crossed the mountains and cast their lots upon the coast of the distant Pacific. But the above will suffice to present a general idea of the character of the family for energy and enterprise.

The careful reader will not fail also to notice, that in all our national contests, from the old French war of 1760 down to the great rebellion, the family has ever been active and patriotic, ready if need be to lay down their lives for the country.

The Rev. Mark L., of Waterbury was a chaplain in the French war, and his son Jesse probably took a part in it.

In the war of the revolution it will be seen that not only the first Edmund but also his sons Gideon and Eli, and David, the son of John of Woodbury, and Col. Jesse were captains and were active and efficient; while Abijah, another son of Edmund was a Lieutenant and lost his life, and nearly every member of the family, of suitable age, was engaged first or last in the contest.

In the war of 1812, which was far from being popular especially in New England, Gen. Henry commanded a Regiment at the contested and bloody battles of Chippeway and Niagara, was in the hottest of the fight, and won a reputation of which his family may well be proud.

In the rebellion, Col. Jesse Henry of Milwaukee, and Abel Edwin of Vermont, held important commands and were actively engaged, and Dr. Melius and several others laid down their lives, while a greater number still went through the war.

Like most other families, the great mass of its members have fortunately occupied the middle ranks of life—the golden mean—secure from the multiplied temptations and dangers of great wealth and of pinching poverty. This is the class from which the vast majority of the valuable men of the country have sprung in the past and will spring in the future. And I take special pleasure in saying here, that in all my investigations into the history of the members of the family I have never found one individual who was ever arrested or punished for a crime. While some of the members have not always been exempt from the weakness of our nature, the general good character of the family has been remarkably preserved.

DERIVATION OF THE NAME.

In regard to the derivation of the name there is a variety of opinions and nothing is clearly decided.

In Domesday book (time of Wm. 1st,) vol. 4th, edition published by the Records commission at page 232 occurs the name of "Leuenot," and at page 206 of the same vol., also occurs the name of "Leouenot."

A volume of the English records commission entitled "Placita de quo warranto—temp Edw., 1st, 2nd and 3rd (folio) at page 284, mention is made of the name of "Levenoth" in Hertfordshire, incidentally in giving a boundary (time of Edward 1st.)

On the 27th of June 1627, administration on the estates of "Constance Levenoth, spinster," "Christian Levenoth, spinster," and "Robert Levenoth, bachelor," was granted to "Christian Levenoth" their mother, all of Gitinge poure, in the county of Gloucester.

In Arthurs etymological dictionary of family and christian names page 180, I find the following derivation of the name: "Leavenworth—local (Welsh) Llyvngwerth—the smooth, level farm, castle or court on the Worth or place on the river Leven."

The Rev. Isaac Taylor in his "Words and Places," pages 121 and 122 says: "Worth" is a place warded or protected and has a meaning nearly the same as ton or garth. It is probably an enclosed homestead for the churls subordinate to the tun. Anglo Saxon "Weorthing," English "Worth."

A "ton" or "tun" was a place surrounded by a hedge or rudely fortified by pallisades, page 120.

Hence arises the terminations of the names of so many persons and places with "worth" and "ton."

1. The first group of people who are affected by this disease are those who are born with it. This is a genetic condition that is passed down from one generation to the next. It is most common in people of African descent.

2. The second group of people who are affected by this disease are those who have acquired it. This is a condition that is caused by a virus that is spread through the air. It is most common in people who live in crowded conditions.

3. The third group of people who are affected by this disease are those who have been exposed to it. This is a condition that is caused by a virus that is spread through the air. It is most common in people who have been in contact with someone who has the disease.

4. The fourth group of people who are affected by this disease are those who have been infected by it. This is a condition that is caused by a virus that is spread through the air. It is most common in people who have been in contact with someone who has the disease.

From Llevn—smooth—we get the name of Lock Leven and Three Rivers called Leven in Scotland, besides others of the same name in Gloucestershire, Yorkshire, Cornwall, Cumberland, Lancashire, page 215.

Others on the contrary have thought that the name may not have been indigenous to England, but brought from Germany and Anglicized from the German family name of "Lowenwerth," which may be possible, but if so it was probably at a very early day.

The name may have been formed from some one of the early names mentioned above; "Levenoth" might easily have grown out of "Leuenot," and Leavenworth out of "Levenoth"; but it will be observed that Peter Leavenworth was living in London in 1629, while a family of Levenoth's were living in Gloucestershire in 1627. Some members of a family may however change their names while others do not, and the derivation from the name of Leuenot, in the time of William 1st, mentioned in Domesday book, is by no means improbable; such changes have been in the past, and still are of the most common occurrence; but it seems to me quite as probable that the etymology given above from Arthur's Dictionary is the correct one.

THE SPELLING.

But whatever may have been the derivation of the name, the spelling of it from the earliest known period, down to the present day, by every member of the family has been uniformly the same. The names of Peter L., found in the Faculty office London, of Thomas and Edward found in the church of St. Clare and of Sir Lewis Leavenworth, are all spelled in the same manner as it is spelled to day. And again while the name is incorrectly spelled in the body of the wills of Thomas, James and Mary Leavenworth, in each instance with an s and in the bonds of said Grace having an "ing" the signature of Grace L., to each of the said two bonds, that of John L., her son, as a witness to one of them and that of her other son Dr. Thomas in the 3rd volume of the town records of Stratford, page 27, is in each instance spelled in the same manner as now. It is therefore quite evident that the name has undergone no change from 1629 to this time, though often spelled in public documents, records, books and the papers of the day in a very great variety of ways, often omitting the a, or adding an s, or both, or inserting an "ing" in place of the "en."

PRESENT DISTRIBUTION OF THE FAMILY.

Before closing these remarks, it may not be inappropriate, perhaps, to allude to the present distribution of the family. It has two progenitors in common. So far as appears, John the brother of the first Thomas was probably never married. There is no intimation of such an event, and as he gave all his property equally to his two nephews, Thomas and John, and no allusion is made to a wife, it leaves such a conclusion quite probable; but it seems from page 162 of Cothren's Woodbury, vol. 1st, that Thomas and John L. were householders in 1682; but if said John was ever married, it is evident that he had no children, and probably his wife died before him.

John the brother of Dr. Thomas was perhaps married, but there is no entry of his marriage or death in the records either of Woodbury or Stratford, and in the first named town he resided till he moved to Stratford, and in the last till 1718, and probably later. There is an entry in the Stratford records of the baptism of Ebenezer, the son of John, in June, 1706; but as his brother Thomas' son, Ebenezer, was born Apr. 7, 1706, and as no mention is ever again made of Ebenezer the son of John, may there not be an error in the Stratford record? There is at least no evidence yet discovered of any other descendant from John the brother of Dr. Thomas, unless the John L. who is mentioned in the appendix, letter (c) was his descendant, which is not impossible; and I have a slight suspicion that he never married.

All the members of the family excepting perhaps the descendants of said John last mentioned, are descended from seven of the eight sons of Dr. Thomas, (Ebenezer having died unmarried), and from his three daughters, Sarah, Mary and Hannah.

I have always been accustomed to look to each of the name, (regarding in this connexion only the male members) as being descended from one of these brothers. To me they seem to stand out quite separate and distinct. The descendants of some of the brothers have been numerous; of others there have been comparatively few. They have lived largely in groups, and while the male descendants of some have long since disappeared from their native homes in Connecticut, they have become numerous in other parts of the Union. Others have remained largely in Connecticut; but with the exception of John, none of the brothers have a majority of their male descendants in that state at the present time.

The different male members descended from the seven brothers are now distributed substantially as follows, taking them as near as may be in the order of their birth:

1. Those of James are residing in the town of Monroe, Ct., and in the counties of Saratoga, Montgomery and Fulton, in the state of New York. They consist of less than a dozen members in both states.

2. Those of David divide themselves naturally into two branches. Those of his son Nathan, since the death of Gen. Nathan and of his son Henry consist only of Nathan of Hinesburgh, and on his death will become extinct. Those of Dr. David's son, Ebenezer, divide into two entirely distinct families; those of the Rev. Ebenezer and who are few in number and reside in Illinois; and those of David, of Nassau, who are far more numerous than those of any other great grandson of Dr. Thomas, and reside principally in the county of Rensselaer, N. Y., where the said David lived and died, and in the southern counties of Steuben and Chenung.

3. The descendants of John, of Woodbury, constitute a majority of all the Leavenworths now in Connecticut, and reside largely in Roxbury, but also at New Haven and Norfolk. They are also widely diffused in other states.

Those of John's son David, through his grand-sons Gideon and Morse are mainly in Connecticut; those through his grand-son David are in New York, Michigan, etc.

Those of John's son John are in Connecticut, New York and California.

Those of his son Lemuel, were in the state of New York, and are extinct.

Those of his son Elihu reside in Connecticut at New Haven and Bridgeport, and in the states of Michigan and Illinois.

Those of his son Amos, at St. Genevieve and St. Louis, in Missouri.

4. The line of Zebulon has been the least prolific of the seven sons, and its numbers, which are in all less than a dozen, reside at the towns of Leavenworth and Mt. Vernon, in Indiana, and at St. Louis, Mo.

5. The Rev. Mark L., had five sons who grew to manhood and from them have sprung, perhaps, more of the eminent men of the family than from either of Dr. Thomas sons, which was owing no doubt to their superior education; but this branch of the family seems in imminent danger of extinction. There are none now remaining except Elisha of Waterbury, son of Dr. Frederick who has no son and is now unmarried, Frederick P., of Shreveport, La., grand-son of Dr. Frederick who has no son but three daughters, Mark Jesse of Andover, N. H., and his son Mark Henry his youngest child now 12 years of age, all descendants of Col. Jesse, and Edward L., of New York and Staten Island, grandson of Elisha, now upwards of forty years of age and unmarried.

6. The descendants of Thomas are somewhat numerous. Those of his son Asa are at Genoa, Wolcott, New Canaan and Syracuse in the state of New York, and at St. Catharines in Canada.

His son Gideon has but one grandson Franklin, and he with his sons Woodard, Enos and Franklin reside at Wilksbarre in Pennsylvania.

Those of his son Abel are at New Haven and Bristol, and Charlotte in Vermont, and at Sandy Creek, N. Y.

Those of his son Thomas by his first wife are in Connecticut, Michigan and Iowa, and those by his second are in Franklin Co., N. Y.

Those of his son Samuel are in Connecticut and at Allegan, Grand Rapids and Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Those of his son Dorman are at Charlotte, Vt.

7. The descendants of Capt. Edmund, the youngest son of Dr. Thomas, are limited to Mark Eli of Newtown, Ct., and his brother Gideon, and Mark Elis' son Eli, both of Rochester, N. Y., and their sons.

If therefore I am correct in the above facts, it appears that Dr. David and Zebulon of Woodbury, have now no male descendants in Connecticut; the Rev. Mark has but one, Elisha of Waterbury; Capt. Edmund has but one, Mark

Much more might be written upon the subject of the family, but the patience of most readers will perhaps have been already exhausted. Those who desire a more intimate and perfect acquaintance will find it in the following pages. I commit it to their hands with a thankful heart that my life has been spared to finish it, so far as it is finished, and that my labors are drawing to a close.

E. W. LEAVENWORTH

Syracuse, June 7th, 1873.

NOTE.—The original town of Stratford was twelve miles square or thereabouts, fronting on the sound and bounded on the East by the Hoosatic River. It was early divided into the Parishes of Ripton, New Stratford, New Stratford and Stratfield.

In 1789 the Parishes of Ripton and New Stratford were incorporated into one town by the name of Huntington.

In 1798 the Parish of North Stratford, was taken from Stratford and incorporated as a town by the name of Trumbull.

In 1821 the Parish of Stratfield, was incorporated by the name of Bridgeport.

And in 1823 New Stratford was taken from Huntington, and incorporated by the name of Munroe.

The town of Woodbury was incorporated in 1674; a settlement having been made there about two years earlier under the name of Pomperaug.

It was bounded n. by Bantam, (Litchfield) e. by Mattatuck, (Waterbury) s. by the Pootatuck (Housatonic) River, w. by Weantinogue, (New Milford).

It comprised the present towns of Woodbury, Washington, Bethlem, Southbury, Roxbury and a small part of Middlebury.

Washington was incorporated in 1779, containing the societies of Judea; New Preston. Southbury, in 1787; Roxbury, 1801; Middlebury, 1807.

The above towns are in Litchfield Co., except Southbury and Middlebury which are in New Haven Co.

Watertown was taken from Waterbury and made a town in 1780. Up to 1800 it included most of Plymouth, (Northbury). From 1739 to 1780, Watertown was a parish by the name of Westbury,

SPECIAL NOTICE.

FOR THE MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY ONLY.

The writing of this Genealogy has necessarily involved a very careful study of the family in all its details. While there is much that is gratifying in its history, there are other things, if I mistake not, especially in its present condition, much to be regretted. We all feel a just pride in its past history in the high character and valuable services of many of its members, and in the frugality, energy, integrity, enterprise, public spirit and general good conduct which have characterized it.

But I very much fear that its standard of character has not been elevated during the past fifty years. While the country has moved on with prodigious strides in wealth, improvement and the general education of the people, have we moved forward with the advancing tide, or have we stood still? I will not be too confident, nor too emphatic on this point, but let us for a moment look at it, and examine briefly the past history of the family.

About fifty years since Gen. Henry was enjoying the laurels won at Chippeway and Niagara, and was at the head of the army in the valley of the Mississippi, while his half-brothers Mark and Frederick were active leading citizens at Waterbury, and pioneers in the manufacturing enterprises of that wealthy and prosperous town.

Seth M. L., had recently graduated at Williams College, and he and his brother Zebulon were busily engaged in laying the foundations of the town of Leavenworth on the Ohio, where for a generation more they were the most prominent and wealthy citizens of the village, and were well known throughout all that part of the state.

Gen. Nathan L., of Hinesburgh, was one of the most highly honored citizens of Vermont, filling important public positions for more than forty years, and his first cousin the Rev. Ebenezer L. L., who had then been recently graduated at Williams, was a most devoted and useful clergyman of the Presbyterian church in central New York.

Special Notice.

David and Isaac L., grandsons of the 3rd Thomas, were the principal merchants at Great Barrington, Mass., and among the most spirited, enterprising and respected citizens of that beautiful town.

The descendants of John in Woodbury and Roxbury, and of James in Montgomery and Saratoga counties, and of Thomas both in Connecticut and Vermont, were among the substantial and highly respected citizens of their respective towns, while isolated members like John Peck L., at Rush, Lemuel, at Whitesboro, John, at Genoa, Isaac, at New Haven, and many others in various places were equally valued and respected citizens.

But how is it now? Can we enumerate as large a number of valuable men at the present day? My personal knowledge is not sufficient to enable me to speak with great confidence on this point; nor do I desire to do so. It might not be in perfect taste. With many fears in regard to the answer to be given, I will submit the question to the fuller knowledge and perhaps the better judgment of many members of the family.

But I am impressed with a strong conviction that the reply must be in the negative, and that we have not improved, (if we have not deteriorated) in the last half century, for the want of a sufficiently high appreciation of the value of knowledge and mental discipline. A thorough education is an almost indispensable requisite to any valuable success in life, and to the accomplishment of any great good. It is an investment which its possessor can never lose. It is an unfailing source of pride and perennial enjoyment, the foundation for extended usefulness, the means through which an honorable support may be secured, and which brings out into the fullest development all the latent powers and energies of the man.

The great want of our country at the present day, the one from which every interest, public and private, and our National reputation, both at home and abroad, are suffering the most serious injuries, is the want of a high sense of honor and unbending integrity in our citizens. The great interests of the country are not suffering from the want of industry or enterprise; not for the want of education or ability, but they are suffering most seriously in every department of business of whatever character, and in every branch of our Government, State and National, from the deplorable want of common honesty. From the distinguished gentlemen—whose wisdom or folly—govern this great country in our National Legislature, at Washington, down to the petty thieves who fatten on the plunder of our cities—there is a succession of knaves who seek the offices of the country, that they may be enriched by the sale of themselves and the robbery of the people.

And yet if a life of seventy years actively spent in a great variety of public and private stations, has indelibly stamped upon my mind one truth more deeply than another, it is this, that there is no trait of character more valuable to a person in any condition or business in life, none which more certainly insures success in any profession or occupation, none which more dignifies and ennobles its possessor, none which gives him more respect or a wider influence with his fellow men, than a high character for unbending integrity; and without this great sheet-anchor, all natural abilities, however great; all acquirements.

however extensive or profound, are comparatively vain and useless. They can give no success in life which is worthy of the name, none which can give satisfaction to its possessor. While I would not belittle the crime of dishonesty, I am ever more impressed by its folly than its criminality, by the weakness and stupidity which permits a person to sacrifice all that is dear and valuable in life to an ignis fatuus which only lures to deceive, rather than by the degradation of character which the knavery necessarily implies.

Impressed with these views, anxious for the improvement and honor of the family, desirous to stimulate the energies and ambition of those who are to follow me, and to do all in my power to aid those among them who think the acquisition of knowledge and the cultivation of the mind are paramount objects in life, I have resolved by my will, to establish three scholarships for the gratuitous education of any young men of the name of Leavenworth, to establish one at Yale College in New Haven, one at Hamilton College at Clinton, Oneida County, N. Y., and one at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. I have thus located them that one of them may be convenient for nearly every member of the family, and I intend that each shall be sufficient to defray the necessary expenses of a prudent young man during the four years of his college course.

I insert this notice here, that it may catch the eye of every member of the family, and I ardently hope that when the scholarships are established, there may in all future time be a young man ready to fill each vacancy as soon as it may arise at either of the institutions, and that each person who enters upon one of these scholarships may have elevated views of the value of life, of its duties, privileges and responsibilities, may diligently improve his opportunities, fit himself for the highest usefulness among his fellow men, and do honor to the name of Leavenworth.

E. W. LEAVENWORTH.

SYRACUSE, JUNE 20, 1873.

N. B.—My will after my death will no doubt be found recorded in the office of the Surrogate of this County—Onondaga, N. Y., at Syracuse, and will show fully the rights of the members of the family in these scholarships.

I pray that no person who shall ever receive the advantages of one of these scholarships, may ever so misapprehend the wisdom of his Creator or the constitution of the world in which we live, as to believe for a moment that his interests in this life can ever be advanced by a single act inconsistent with the highest personal honor and integrity.

It is for the education of men of this character that these scholarships will be established. It is my hope and prayer that they may be potent means, not only in elevating the position and character of the family, but that they may from year to year, through all time, send out into the active duties of life men who will not only be diligent in business, but who will live for the good of mankind and the honor of their Creator.

CORRECTIONS, OMISSIONS, ETC.

CORRECTIONS, OMISSIONS, Etc.

Those into whose hands this work may fall, will confer a very great favor by advising the author of any errors or omissions which they may discover. That there are many scattered through its pages he has no doubt.

He would also be very happy to receive a genealogical statement of the descendants of daughters as well as sons down to the present time.

Blank ruled sheets will be found in many of the volumes, inserted expressly for the purpose of being used in noting all corrections, omissions, etc., for permanent preservation.

It is not impossible, should his life be spared many years, that he may, hereafter, publish a second edition, enlarged and corrected.

And if not, all corrections and additions will be carefully preserved, and with the letters and other papers, engravings, etc., will be carefully packed and boxed, and deposited in some safe place at Syracuse—perhaps in the vault of the Syracuse Savings Bank—for future inspection and use, should they ever be wanted by any future historian of the family.

GENEALOGY.

1. THOMAS LEAVENWORTH.

Born in England.

Married Grace ———, who died as supposed in 1715. They emigrated to America, as learned only from tradition, after 1664. He died at Woodbury, August, 3, 1683.

An inventory of his personal estate was taken August, 20th, 1683, amounting to £225.2.1. This appears by the Probate records of Fairfield District, also that he left two sons and one daughter. Names not given, that of the daughter never ascertained.

CHILDREN.

3. THOMAS, b. 1673, d. Aug. 4, 1754, at Ripton.

4. JOHN, b. — d. after 1718.

5. DAU. b. — d. —

His wife Grace survived him and remained at Woodbury, for a time, perhaps permanently. On the 11th day of June, 1684, she executed two bonds, one to George Musgrave, of London, in the presence of Law'r Hammond, Fran Burroughs, John Leavenworth and Benjamin Bullivant—the other to Mary Gawthorn, of London, widow, in the presence of the same parties, except the said John Leavenworth.

These bonds are among the papers on file in the State Library of Connecticut, at Hartford. Connecticut Archives, Private controversies, 11 document, 152.

From fac similies of her signature kindly sent to me by Charles J. Hoadley, Esq., State Librarian, it is evident that she was at the time of the execution of said bonds, quite advanced in life, or very infirm, doubtless the former.

Speaking of these bonds, in a letter to the author, under date of August 17th, 1864, Mr. Hoadly remarks, "There was a seal attached to her name on both bonds, with a coat of arms, but both these seals were, stolen from the documents since 1842 and before 1856. Upon one of the bonds, (both of which seem to have been executed in Boston,) the name of John Leavenworth appears as a witness, I send you a fac simile of both the autographs."

She was living, probably at Woodbury, in February, 1686, and owned land in Hasky Meadow, about a mile from Woodbury village. And on the 26th day of May, 1687, she deeded lands in Woodbury, to her two sons, Thomas and John, and on the 28th day of May, 1687, she also deeded other lands to Henry Deering, of Boston, Mass., Book 1 of Woodbury Records, p. 45 Etc.

(See copy of the letter Appendix D., and of the letter of John Ward Dean, Secretary of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society in relation to the witnesses to the Execution of the Bond mentioned below.)

The first Thomas L, was a farmer, and settled, no doubt, on Good Hill, in the west part of the present town of Woodbury, not far from the line of Roxbury, and there and in that vicinity, the family have remained from that day till the present, and are now quite numerous there. In 1733-4, his son Dr. Thomas, had a controversy with Benjamin Hurd, in regard to the line of these lands. Book 3d, p. 25 of Woodbury Records.

A tradition in the family, is, that he landed at New Haven.

No doubt, he came from England. In Russells Lives of Eccentric Personages, page 96 in the life of Sir Gerald Massey, reference is made to Sir Lewis Leavenworth, as living in London, and to a ball given by him about the middle of the last century.

From Miss Harriet E. Bainbridge, of London, I learn that she finds the names of Edward and Thomas Leavenworth, in the parish of St. Clare, Southwark, in 1664. This is about the time the first Thomas is supposed to have arrived at New Haven. She also finds in the Faculty office, London, the marriage license of Peter Leavenworth and Sarah Wood, in 1729.

The execution of the bonds above mentioned, shows that there were business transactions between Thomas L. and persons in London, which would not probably have existed, had he not been formerly a resident there.

Little is known of the first Thomas. His head stone does not seem to be found in the cemeteries at Woodbury. But he was evidently a prosperous man in his affairs, judging from the property he left, and brought up his children in habits of industry and frugality. But unfortunately, few facts are preserved from which to form definite opinions in regard to his character, save as the characters of children shed light upon those of their parents.

2. John Leavenworth.

Brother of the first Thomas, no doubt came from England with him. Born in England.

Married (probably not.) Died in 1702, at Stratford, but settled first in Woodbury.

An inventory of his estate was taken October, 12th, 1702, and letters of administration were granted to his "cousin" Thomas L. of Stratford, no doubt his nephew, as nephews were then often called "cousins." The letters were granted November 7th, 1702, and his property was equally divided between his two nephews, Thomas and John.

The deed from John L., (son of Thomas,) to his brother Dr. Thomas, of lands in Woodbury, dated September, 11th, 1705, shows that the above mentioned John was his uncle, and brother of the 1st Thomas. See Book No. 20, p. 130, of Woodbury Records.

John L. bought land in Woodbury, in 1692—Book No. 2, p. 130, but whether it was the brother or son of the first Thomas, does not appear. Probably it was the brother of the 1st Thomas, as John the son of Dr. Thomas, was probably too young at that time to be dealing in lands.

From page 65 of volume 1 Cothren's Woodbury, it seems that he was one of the original proprietors of Woodbury, and on page 163 of the same volume, it appears that he was a householder.

But it does not appear otherwise that he was married, and on his death he gave his property to his nephews, Thomas and John, sons of his brother Thomas. But his wife might have died before him and childless.

There is a very interesting article in the 25th volume of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, giving a full and minute account of "House of the olden time." It was an ancient house built early in the last century, on Summer street, in Boston, directly opposite to Trinity Church, and which was still standing and in good preservation up to or near the time of the great fire in 1872, when I suppose it must have been destroyed. But it may have been torn down as the ground is now October 1873, built up in stores.

In the "Book of possessions," (a book which though on a small scale, resembles Domesday book—and was ordered by the General Court about sixteen years after the settlement of Boston,) the premises in question are described as the garden of Gamaliel Wayte, who had however a lot on the south side of Mill street, in 1642, and probably lived there. But in 1694 his son John Wayte, lived on the lot and sold it to John Leavenworth. He mortgaged it the same year to Simeon Stoddard, who eventually became the owner, and sold the property in 1727 to Leonard Vassall, who was born in Jamaica, in 1678. Then the said Vassall erected the house in question, about 1730. Vassall also built at Quincy, (then Braintree,) a little earlier, the house now owned and occupied by Charles Francis Adams. The principal apartments were finished with arras, tapestry and wainscot, as was used then in the best houses of the day.

As the bonds mentioned in No. one were executed in Boston, John Leavenworth must have been there in 1684, and doubtless he was there again in 1694, when this property was purchased by him. The description of said house as given in the Register, shows that it must have been one of the finest residences then existing in or about Boston.

It is a very remarkable fact that the original boundaries of said lot as given in said "Book of Possessions," have never been enlarged or diminished down to the present time.

Whether John Leavenworth ever personally occupied the said premises does not appear, I had supposed that his residence was always at Woodbury or Stratford.

Born 1673, perhaps at Woodbury, possibly in England.

Married Mary Jenkins, about 1698, at Stratford? She was a daughter of David Jenkins, by his wife Grace, born in 1680, and died at Ripton, in June, 1768, aged 89. Ripton Parish was then a part of Stratford, now town of Huntington. He died at Ripton, August 4th, 1754, aged 77, and was buried at Ripton Center, and also his wife.

1695, June 10, John Judson, of Woodbury, buys house and lands of Thomas L., and sells to him property in Stratford, where he lived that year and onward probably, till 1721. Till 1795, he lived in W. Woodbury Records 2d Book, p. 132. Same date he bought lands in Stratford, and also in 1702-3.

1697-8 was received into communion with the Stratford Church, having on the 11th of January, of that year "owned the covenant."

1702, he obtained land in Woodbury, from John L., his brother—Book 1, p. 58.

1716, December, 16, had bought land of Edward Burroughs.

1717, January 30, sold land to his brother John.

1717, March 18. received land near Robert Wheelers.

1719, February, 25, signs a petition for a Bridge at Ripton.

1721, Sold his homestead in Stratford.

1724, Dr. Thomas L., and his wife became original members of the Church at Ripton, and at the same time or afterwards, James and his wife, Ebenezer, Mark, Sarah, Mary and Hannah, his children, join.

1726. Mention is made of him as Deacon Thomas, and as one of the Society's Committee.

1727. He is the Society's Committee and Collector of rates.

1728. December 31, order to lay out to Dr. Thomas L., 1 1-2 acres of six mile division lands.

1731. He was interested in a copper-mine, in Woodbury.

1734. May 5th, received a bequest from his son Ebenezer, in the distribution of his estate, March 1734-5. He also had a controversy this year, with Robert Wheeler, respecting some lands at Ripton.

1748. July 6, made his will.

1754. June 12, his widow, Mary, offers his will for probate.

1754. July 15th, his will proved.

See copy of same in Appendix Letter E.

Dr. Thomas was a man of position, influence, energy and wealth. He was one of the founders of the first Church, at Ripton, a Deacon, Society's Committee, etc., etc. He had a proper appreciation of the value of learning and educated his son Mark at Yale, where he was graduated in 1737. His son David was educated a physician, and practiced at Woodbury, where he died.

He left a large property for those times, and the place where he resided, and as much of his real estate was in Woodbury, where he had not resided long, if at all, after becoming of age, he probably inherited it from his father Thomas, and also other lands, which he had disposed of previous to his death.

He evidently gave to his children all the advantages, usually enjoyed at that period, as all of them became active, useful and prominent men in after life, in the places where they resided.

His will is recorded in the Probate Court of Fairfield District, in Book 1754 to 1757, pages 41 to 44.

of a small stream coming down from the west, on which they had a saw mill, and where the timber was much of it prepared for the Bridge.

There was a ship or boat yard on the river, between the dwellings of Capt. Edmund and his son Gideon, where they built such vessels as navigated the river, down to a time within the memory of those now living.

This property has remained in the family for one hundred and fifty years and more, and is now owned by the present Mrs. David Shelton, of Huntington, the Great-grand daughter of Dr. Thomas, from whom, being now childless, it must pass into other hands.

No doubt, in 1721, before Birmingham or Shelton were even dreamed of, Dr. Thomas may have imagined that a town would naturally grow up on the river, and the small stream which there enters the Hoosatic, may have determined his location.

Leavenworth's Bridge, which was a Toll Bridge, was built originally, by Capt. Edmund L., and his son Gideon, and by the latter was subsequently rebuilt. The west end of the bridge rested on his farm. It was built about 1768-9.

I have been full and minute in my account of Dr. Thomas and wife, for the reason that he is the common progenitor of the whole family, now in the United States.

The head stones to the graves of himself and wife, still remain in good condition in the old cemetery, near the Ripton Church, of which he was one of the founders.

4. John Leavenworth.—(THOMAS^{1st})

Born ——— propably in Woodbury, possibly in England.

He lived for a time in Woodbury. Settled in Stratford, as a blacksmith. Died after 1718. He sold land in Stratford in 1705 and 1715. In 1705-6, he bought the house, lot, shop, etc., of Abram Kimberly. This ground is now covered by the Summer residence of Wm. A. Booth, Esq., of Stratford and New York. Kimberly was a blacksmith.

CHILDREN.

EBENEZER, baptized June 1706, at Stratford. According to the Stratford records, this Ebenezer was son of John, but may not this have been Ebenezer, the son of his brother Thomas, born April 7th, 1706? There is no information of the birth, marriage or death of John, the son of the 1st Thomas.

He or his uncle John, probably the latter, bought land in Woodbury, in 1692. Book 2d, p. 132.

On the 11th of September, 1705, he sold to his brother Thomas, both then residing at Stratford, all his interest in lands in Woodbury, derived from his father Thomas or his Uncle John. Book No. 20, p. 130.

He seems to have been a man of character and standing, as it appears by the Colonial Records of Conn., vol. 6, p. 68, that he was a Deputy to the General Assembly, from the town of Stratford, in the year 1718.

Children of Dr. Thomas, of Stratford, Ripton Parish.

6. James Leavenworth.²—THOMAS,² THOMAS.¹

Born September 1st, 1699, at Stratford.

Married Hester Trowbridge, August 23, 1720. She was probably a daughter of James Trowbridge, of New Haven, Ct., by his 2d wife Esther, or Hester Howe, whom he married September, 1692, and had this daughter in 1694. She died at Ripton, in 1780, aged 86. His will is dated August 1st, 1759, but as it was not proved till April 25th, 1763, he probably did not die till that year, though in Bronson's Waterbury it is stated to have been in 1759, (p. 516.) It was between 1759 and 1763.

He and his wife were original members of the Church at Ripton, and he was Collector of Church rates in 1736.

He left a large real estate as appears by his will, a copy of which will be found in the Appendix Letter F., and is recorded in the records of Fairfield District, in a Book dated 1761, to 1763, p. 465, to 468. His personal property was appraised at £435. 7.11,

All born in Stratford. He bought lands at the White Hills, in Ripton Parish, in 1728. See Stratford Records. I think he lived in that part of the town of Stratford, now known as Monroe, and his descendants are still residents there, at and about Stepney, on and near the Hoosatic R. R. He has also a large descent in the counties of Fulton, Montgomery and Saratoga, N. Y., at Gloversville, Kingsborough, Amsterdam, and Galway, etc., etc.

Born October 12, 1701, at Stratford.

He had a number of slaves with their families, which he disposed of by his will.

He was during his life one of the leading men of the town of Woodbury.

He lived on Good Hill, near the residence of the late John L., and on or near the very ground where his Grandfather first settled and died. The cellar is still visible.

Married ESTHER ———, about 1744. She died in 1793. June 27, 1742, joined the Woodbury Congregational Church. He died May 2, 1778, in Woodbury, Conn. Was a farmer, and probably spent his life there. Bronson in his history of Waterbury, p. 516, states his death as being in 1793. Dr. Thomas deeded lands to him on the north end of Good Hill, October 10, 1735, book 5 p. 39.

October 13, 1766 Bronson has it.

All born in Waterbury.

For the following sketch of him I am indebted to his lineal descendant, the Hon. F. J. Kingsbury, of Waterbury.

REV. MARK LEAVENWORTH,

Was born in Stratford, Conn. He is supposed to have fitted for college, and probably began his preparation for the ministry, with that famous teacher of the young, Rev. Jedediah Mills, (Y.C. 1722,) then minister of Ripton. He was licensed to preach by the New Haven East Association in 1738, having graduated at Yale in 1737. In 1739, after preaching a few Sunday's on trial, he was unanimously called to succeed Rev. John Southmayd, in the church at Waterbury, Conn. Mr. Southmayd was a man of culture and ability, and not advanced in years, but his health was poor, he was possessed of some means and he desired to be relieved from his charge. He lived seventeen years after this, an honored and influential citizen, and it is a tribute to Mr. Leavenworth's discretion and ability, which will be appreciated by all young clergymen who have had their predecessor in their congregations, that Mr. Southmayd at his death, made Mr. Leavenworth his executor.

Mr. L. had a £500 settlement, and £100 salary, but they prudently took a bond from him that the £500 should be returned if within twenty years he turned churchman, or was guilty of any immorality or heresy which rendered him unfit for his work. At the end of about ten years he was released from this bond.

He was ordained in March, 1742, having made good use of his time in some respects, as he was married the preceding February to one of his new congregation, Miss Ruth Peck, granddaughter of Rev. Jeremiah Peck, first minister of the town.

This year, 1742, Whitfield first preached in New England, and from this and other causes, arose differences dividing the people into two sharply opposing theological parties. The Whitfield party were called "new lights," among these was Mr. Leavenworth, evidently a progressive man, and as the conservative party were the stronger in Connecticut, this fact doubtless, somewhat affected Mr. L's theological standing and importance in the State for many years.

In 1744 for assisting at the ordination of Rev. Jonathan Lee, of Salisbury, supposed to be thoroughly tainted with the Whitfield heresy, and inclined to the Cambridge platform, Mr. Leavenworth, Rev. Mr. Humphrey's, of Derby, and Rev. Mr. Todd, of Northbury, (Plymouth,) were tried and "suspended from all associational communion." It is probable, however, that this sentence was soon revoked, or possibly disregarded.

In 1747, Mr. L. refused that part of his salary which was levied upon the church of England inhabitants, showing a strong love of justice and a liberality in advance of his time.

In 1760, in the old French War, he served as chaplain to Col. Whiting's 2d Connecticut Regiment, enduring with spirit the hardships of that campaign. He was on the State Committee for raising troops in the Revolution, and his name heads the list of those in Waterbury, who took the oath of fidelity after the declaration of independence.

He was a member of the Connecticut Society for the promotion of Freedom in 1793. So that age had not impaired his interest in the public weal.

He was a man of sound judgment, strong character, much personal dignity, living in a style of elegant hospitality for those times, a keen wit, and of considerable ability as a preacher. Dr. Bronson in his History of Waterbury, from which much of this article has been obtained, says of him, that "he had a large heart in the right place—was kind to the poor and beloved of all." Two of his printed sermons still exist, one a funeral-sermon on the death of Daniel Southmayd, Esq., a prominent member of his congregation, preached in 1754. The other the Annual Election sermon preached at Hartford, before the General Assembly, May, 1772. Copies of these are among the collections of the Connecticut Historical Society, at Hartford. They are creditable productions.

Dr. Sam'l. Elton, of Watertown, now some years dead, remembered Mr. L., as he appeared to him, when a boy, at the church at Watertown. He said he was a man of medium height, straight figure, commanding appearance and voice, and a bright dark eye, that he stood up in the pulpit and looked around for a moment on the congregation and then announced his text. "The father's, where are they? and the prophets!—Do they live forever?" He then went on to speak of the changes that had taken place in that congregation within his own memory in a manner that made a deep impression on his youthful hearers.

He laid the corner stone of a new church, which bore his initials "M. L. 1795," and which is still to be seen, though the building has been removed from its original site and converted to secular uses.

He died Aug. 20, 1797, in the 86th year of his age, and the 58th of his ministry, having publicly officiated only a short time before his death. He died and was buried at Waterbury.

12. Thomas Leavenworth.¹—THOMAS,¹ THOMAS.¹

Born at Stratford, Ct.

Married (1.) BETTY DAVIS, 17—. She died April 24, 1758. (2.) RHODA OLDS, October 10, 1758. She died at Watertown, May 1, 1794, aged 67. December 7, 1760, he owned the half-way covenant and joined First Congregational Church, Woodbury.

He received July 6, 1748, from his father, one whole right in commonage in Woodbury, and one third of the remainder of said rights in commonage, with £100, (old tenor,) Upon the death of his brother Ebenezer, he received March 1734-5 a part of his estate. In 1727, he was Collector of rates at Ripton. He was a tanner and settled in Woodbury, but failed in business, and went to Wyoming, where he again began business, but was driven out by the Indians in 1778, and while still within sight of his home, saw it in flames. A part of their pewter ware was put into a brass kettle and sunk in a well, or buried in the bank of a stream. They returned to Oxford, Ct., and he died, after 1795? at the residence of his son Gideon, in Hamden, and was buried in the neighborhood of Shephard's Brook. He lived in Woodbury in 1752, and before and after.

Mr. Cothren says, administration was granted on his estate, November 16, 1781, at Woodbury. Administration granted to John L. the 3d, 7th Probate Book page 71. It would seem that this must be correct. But Jared L. Pitcher, son of Polly L., who was the daughter of Gideon, Thomas' son writes me that he died near Shephards Brook, in the town of Hamden, seven miles from New Haven, and was buried there, and that he was over 80 years of age, and that his Grandfather Gideon, has often told him about it. This is not in the Woodbury district. My mother informed me that he spent the winter of 1795-6 with his grandson David, at Canaan, N. Y., then returned to his son Gideon's, at Hamden, and soon after died there.

We cannot suppose any error in the Records, nor does it seem possible that two independent and perfectly reliable sources of information should be incorrect. Could Cothren refer to another Thomas L?

When driven out of the Wyoming Valley with his family, they picked their way as best they could, through the woods of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, living mainly on berries, and reached their friends in Connecticut, with only the few clothes they wore.

Dorman the youngest child, he led by the hand, Asa and some of the older children probably never went to Pennsylvania. I think Thomas lived at Waterbury in 1770.

His failure in early life at Woodbury, and the second loss of all his property in the Wyoming Valley, leaving him with a large family of small children was most embarrassing and disheartening, but did not prevent him from so raising and educating his children, as to enable them to attain respectable and independent positions in society.

13. MARY LEAVENWORTH¹, THOMAS², THOMAS¹.

Born at Stratford about 1717. She died at Huntington, aged 96 years.

Married about 1740? Joshua Perry of Ripton, a brother of Abner Perry, who m. her sister Sarah. Her 5th child ANNA was born May, 11th, 1751. The brothers were farmers living on adjoining farms, and nearly opposite to Derby. She seems by the Parish Records to have been an original member of the church at Ripton in 1724, but the Records perhaps do not distinguish the original from later members.

In the record of the will of Dr. Thomas Leavenworth, his father-in-law, in the Probate office at Fairfield, he is called JOSEPH. This is an error. In the original will, still on file there, the name is JOSHUA.

In vol. 1778 to 1781, page 178 and 179 of the Probate Records at Fairfield, is found an inventory of the estate of Joshua Perry, dated February 1st, 1779, amounting to £288.08, and an additional inventory, dated May 14th, 1774 of 100 acres of land in Derby £340. This inventory was proved by Samuel Adams, Executor.

Children.—1. ELI; 2. JAMES; 3. ISRAEL; 4. LEVI; 5. LUCRETIA; 6. MARY; 7. JOSHUA; 8. SARAH.

The first three followed no particular business and did little justice to the name of Perry.

4th. LEVI studied medicine and was for some years a physician at Stockbridge, Mass., then went to Canada.

5th. LUCRETIA married Mr. — Eddy of Moravia, Cayuga Co., and in 1836, was living there with a family of children.

7th and 8th. Of JOSHUA and SARAH I am not informed.

2. JOSHUA was graduated at Yale in the class of 1775,—studied theology with his uncle Mark Leavenworth of Waterbury, who often had a large number of young men under him preparing for the ministry. Dr. Brace informs me that sometimes there were fifteen or twenty. Was settled some years at Mount Carmel, near New Haven Conn., married a Miss Strong of Farmington, an accomplished and wealthy lady, became a farmer, had one feeble minded or perhaps idiotic child, who lived about thirty years. JOSHUA died in 1812.

3. EBENEZER an active and energetic farmer died at Oxford Conn., unmarried, early in life.

4. Rev. DAVID PERRY, (son of Joshua Perry and Mary Leavenworth, of Ripton Parish, now Huntington, Stratford, Conn.,) b. July 19, 1746, O. S., graduated at Yale College, in 1772.

Married JERUSHA LORD, of Middletown, Conn., Aug. 20, 1776, (daughter of Ichabod Lord, of Colchester, Conn.) He studied theology with the Rev. Mark Leavenworth, his uncle at Waterbury. He was Pastor of the Congregational church at Harwinton, Conn., ten years, when by reason of troubles which resulted from the agitation of questions relating to the "Half Way Covenant," he left in 1784, and was installed Pastor of the Congregational church in Richmond, Mass., whither he removed in October of that year.

He labored there as a successful minister for thirty-three years, and died of disease of the heart, June 7, 1817. His remains were followed to the grave by his wife and ten children and numerous grand-children.

He was a man of commanding presence, and his figure was one to be remembered as he walked up the aisle of his meeting house on Sunday, with his gun in hand, a practice common with the clergy, upon the frontier of that early day.

She was born at Marlboro, Conn., February 7, 1755, O. S., and died at the residence of her son John H. Perry, in Lee, Mass., July 13, 1832. With a delicate constitution and slender health, she gave birth to eleven children, all but one of whom lived to old age.

With a small salary, much of which was paid in produce, by the aid of this admirable woman, Mr. Perry educated three of their sons in College, and at his death left a handsome patrimony for the support of the family. The farm

He d. at Marshall, Mich., of typhoid pneumonia, September 27, 1838. He settled first at Salina, as a merchant. On the opening of the Erie canal, he removed to Albany and formed the first regular transportation company on the Erie canal, under the name of Brace, Joy & Co., consisting of five partners, one at each of the cities of Buffalo, Rochester, Utica, Albany and New York. They were very prosperous until the New York partner became a defaulter.

Mr. B. then removed to Marshall, Mich., and became a large farmer, and President of the Bank of Marshall.

Children.—1. MARGARET E.; 2. SARAH F.; and THOMAS B.

MARGARET was b. ——— 1823, at Salina; m. ——— 1845, Robert Dyke, merchant; now Collector of Internal Revenue, for the Northern District of Ind. They have had nine children, four of whom, only, survive, viz.—

1. ROBERT B., EMMA F., WILLIAM A., and WALTER L.

SARAH F., b. ——— 1826, at Albany, m. ——— the Rev. Rufus Patch. She d. about eighteen months after their marriage.

HORACE B., b. at Orville, Onondaga Co., in 1830, and d. at Marshall, Mich., in 1837.

11. The Rev. SAMUEL WILLIAMS BRACE, the eleventh and last child of Capt. Elizur, was b. May 1, 1790, at Rutland, Vt.

His father and sundry others from Litchfield, Co., Ct., emigrated to Vermont in 1789, but in 1796 he removed to the town of Pompey, Onondaga Co., N. Y. After a few years he removed to the town of Lysander in the same county. There was not then, and never had been, a school of any description in the town. The principal opportunity which Samuel W. enjoyed for attending school, were two winters spent with friends in the town of Manlius; yet he formed the purpose of enjoying the advantages of a life at College. In pursuit of this object, in the winter of 1809, he walked from Oswego, where the family were then living, to Hamilton Academy, Clinton, Oneida Co., (now Hamilton College), a distance of nearly one hundred miles, as the route then was. In this institution, under the instruction and encouragement of its able instructor, Seth, afterwards Professor, Norton, his progress in learning was so creditable that he was soon promoted to the station of assistant teacher. By this means he was able to pay for his tuition, besides paying his other small expenses, being compelled to rely entirely upon himself for support. After two years of diligent study, teaching school in the winters, he entered the Sophomore class at Hamilton. The summer preceding he spent in teaching a classical school at Onondaga Hollow, which was the germ of the present Onondaga Academy, which was founded mainly through the efforts of the Hon. Joshua Forman, and the Rev. D. C. Lansing, then the pastor there.

Samuel W. Bruce

It was at this place and time that the attention of Mr. Brace was first effectually called to the subject of personal religion.

In the autumn of 1812 he joined his class in college, which consisted of six members, and was the first who graduated with a regular commencement, from this rising seminary. Soon after graduating in 1815, Mr. B. entered the Theological Seminary at Andover, where he graduated in 1818, having finished the three year course and been licensed to preach the gospel.

He commenced his ministry at Dracutt, Middlesex Co., Mass., including within the bounds of the congregation the territory of Chelmsford, on which the flourishing city of Lowell is now situated. There he labored six weeks, during a most interesting revival. Declining an invitation to preach as a candidate to a large and wealthy congregation at Londonderry, N. H., he repaired to Bridgewater, Oneida Co., and spent seven months in the midst of a revival which reached almost the entire population. He declined an urgent and unanimous call to settle at B., and accepted a call to supply the desk of the Rev., afterwards Dr., Axtelle, at Geneva, N. Y., during his absence on account of ill health. His introduction to the place was through the influence of the Rev. Henry Dwight, previously the model pastor of the first church of Utica, but then, by loss of health, President of the Bank of Geneva. Here a powerful revival followed the labors of Mr. B., and reached the adjoining town of Phelps, when he was called as their pastor and guide, and was ordained and installed by the presbytery of Geneva, in December, 1819. He remained at Phelps four years, and his labors were eminently successful, new members being added to the church at nearly every communion.

In February, 1824, Mr. B. accepted an invitation to labor as associate pastor with the Rev. Mr. Aiken, of the First Presbyterian Church at Utica, then a village of about ——— inhabitants. After some months it was judged best to organize another church, which was done, Messrs. Frost, of Whitesboro, Coe, of New Hartford, and Aiken and Brace taking part in the service. It was called "The Bleecker Street Presbyterian Church of Utica." Twenty-seven names were first enrolled on forming the church, but it was greatly enlarged at its first communion. Near the close of the year Mr. B. was duly installed by the Presbytery of Oneida. After a very successful ministry of more than four years, during which time more than 250 persons were added to the church, Mr. B. removed to Skaneateles, and on the unanimous call of the people, was installed as pastor of the church at that place, by the Presbytery of Cayuga. In accepting this call, Mr. B. was obliged to decline a call from East Hartford, Ct., which was repeated and declined after the lapse of a year.

Having in 1833 entered upon the sixteenth year of his ministry at S., and impressed the power of Divine truth in eight revivals, he took a dismission from them, and removed to Binghamton Broome Co., then a village of about ——— inhabitants. Here, on a unanimous call, he became the acting pastor of the Congregational church. After a residence here of about three years, not marked by any remarkable success in his ministry, he resolved to retire from the active duties of the pastoral office, and to preach in vacant churches, as opportunities might offer. In pursuance of this object, he removed again to Utica in August, 1845, and purchased a pleasant home, on Whitesboro street, in the western part of the city, where he now resides, (September 15, 1873), in the eighty-third year of his age. Until quite recently he has been actively engaged in the duties of the ministry, but is now suffering from a slight shock of paralysis, which, however, does not affect his mental powers, and from which he is gradually recovering, being now able to walk easily, and to travel.

During the twenty seven years that he has been in Utica without a pastoral charge, he has been the stated supply of the churches at Bridgewater, Paris Hill, Sangerfield, Norwich Corners and Winfield, in all of which, except the last, special success attended his labors. The success of his labors through life has been often remarked, and, as near as can be ascertained, about eighteen special revivals were enjoyed in connection with his personal labors, while he was often called upon to aid his professional brethren under similar circumstances. Many young men, also, by his advice and encouragement, have been led to seek an education and the ministry.

In November, 1819, previous to his ordination at Phelps, Mr. B. married Harriet Kilham, the third daughter of Deacon Gustavus Kilham, of New Hartford, Oneida Co. She had been a pupil of his while teaching a classical school there, and the engagement was then made. They lived in the enjoyment of great happiness for nearly forty years, when she died of disease of the heart.

In July, 1862, Mr. B. was married to Miss Martha B. Fish, of Troy, Pa., with whom he still lives.

In June, 1871, the College of Liberia, (Africa), conferred upon Mr. B. the degree of D. D., the first which it had ever conferred. Mr. B. had long been the warm and active friend of the institution, and had aided it greatly by sending to it valuable books from his own library, as well as from those of his ministerial brethren, and had long acted as the Agent of "The African Colonization Society," without fee or reward.

This aged clergyman was also for many years, the efficient and successful Agent of the "Oneida County Bible Society," with a merely nominal compensation.

Born November 6, 1721, at Stratford, as stated by Cothren, in his history of Ancient Woodbury. M. ABNER PERRY, of Ripton, and after the marriage of her sister about two years, as is supposed. The Stratford records state her birth as October 6, 1722; but she was baptized in September, 1722. He was b. at Stratford in 1715. She was living at the date of her father's will, July 6, 1743; also of her mother's, May 11, 1758. Whether she was still living at the date of her husband's will, June 22, 1776, does not appear; but, as it contains no reference to her, she probably was not.

Deacon Daniel Bennett and Abner Perry, the son of the Testator, were appointed Executors. The latter presented it for probate January 2, 1792. This will may be found in the old records of the Stratford Probate District, now at Bridgeport. Distribution of the estate was made October 5, 1795. Real estate valued at £283, 7s. 6d. was apportioned to each of the sons.

The Rev. Benjamin L. Swan, late of Stratford, Ct., now of Oyster Bay, N. But he does not appear to be mentioned in the list of his children, as given by Savage, which are,—

- All born in Huntington.

May 5, 1734, Capt. Edmund received a bequest from his brother Ebenezer. July 6, 1748, or rather on the death of his father, (that being the date of his will,) he received from his father the whole of his farm at Stratford, where he lived, fronting on the Hoosatonic, saving only certain privileges reserved to his wife; also, all his rights in commonage in Stratford. July 25, 1749, revokes the appointment of Capt. Edmund as his executor.

Capt. Edmund and his son, Gideon, built the Toll Bridge across the Hoosatonic, a short distance above his residence, about the years 1768-9. Capt. Gideon rebuilt it, and it was owned in the family, I think, as long as it continued. He also built and owned many vessels at his boat-yard on the river, just above his dwelling, and just below the stream which enters the Hoosatic on the Doctor's old farm.

In the spring of 1777 he was the Captain of a company of infantry, raised at Ripton by the authority of the State, called the "Alarm-list Company," or, "Householders," which company belonged to Col. Samuel W. Whiting's brigade. A few days before Danbury was burned, said company was ordered into service and stationed at Fairfield, to guard it, for four months. They guarded the prisoners taken at Danbury, and brought them to Fairfield. At the expiration of the four months, Capt. Joseph Birdseye, of South Ripton Parish, was to relieve said Edmund from the command of the company, but was prevented by illness; and Capt. L. continued in command through the campaign, either in field or garrison. The other officers of the company were John Wooster, First Lieutenant, and John Lake, Ensign, all of South Ripton. In 1779 the company was ordered from Ripton to New Haven, still under command of Capt. L., where they met the enemy, and followed them up the Sound to Fairfield, where the enemy landed and burned the town, with the loss of one man killed.

This was really the fighting family of the name, though none were wanting in their duty in those trying times. Not only was Capt. Edmund in the field, but his two sons, Gideon and Eli, commanded companies and were actively engaged in the war; and his son Abijah, who was a Lieutenant in the army, lost his life by exposure and hardship, and even his son Edmund, though but a boy, served as a soldier.

Thus, every male member of the family, himself and his four sons, were all actively engaged, three of them as Captains commanding companies. Edmund, the father, being over fifty years of age, and Edmund, his son but twelve years of age when he first served, waiting upon his father. All the brothers of Captain Edmund were more than sixty years of age when the Revolution commenced, and too old to engage in the conflict; but there were few of their sons who were not out during some part of the seven years.

JANE, daughter of Truman Smith and Maria, his wife, m. George A. Hoyt, November 27, 1855, and is childless.

The Honorable Truman Smith was the oldest son of Phineas and Deborah Ann Smith, and was born at Roxbury, Litchfield county, Conn., November 27, 1791. His father was the oldest son of a family, two of whose members became very distinguished at the Bar, and in public life in Connecticut. One of them, the Honorable Nathaniel Smith, of Woodbury, in Litchfield Co., very early attained to a high rank as a lawyer; was a Member of Congress from 1795 to 1799, and a Judge of the Supreme Court from 1806 to 1819. He died in 1822, aged sixty-two years.

Another brother of the same family was the Hon. Nathan Smith, of New Haven, who was a lawyer of high distinction, and died in Washington in 1835, being at the time of his death a member of the U. S. Senate from Connecticut.

Pinneas Smith was a farmer, and in intellectual ability was in no degree inferior to his brothers above named. The subject of this notice was brought up on his father's farm, and owes whatever success he achieved in after life to habits formed, and principles inculcated in the home of his childhood. He entered Yale College in 1811, and graduated in 1815. The Hon. John M. Clayton, of Delaware, and the Hon. Thomas A. Marshall, of Kentucky, with several others who were afterwards distinguished in public life, were his classmates.

He commenced the study of the law soon after his graduation, and was admitted a member of the bar in Litchfield county, in March, 1818. His classmate Clayton was admitted to the same bar at the same time. In the fall of the same year he opened an office for the practice of his profession in Litchfield, and that was his home till 1854. The bar of Litchfield county then numbered more than forty members, and many of them were very eminent in their profession. Mr. Smith soon felt that at such a bar as this, faithful study and indefatigable labor would alone secure success. To such study and labor Mr. Smith devoted himself strictly; and he soon became known as a young lawyer of marked ability and decided promise. He soon acquired professional employment; and at the end of ten or twelve years he stood among the most talented of his brethren in the management of the most important cases before the higher court.

About the time of Mr. Smith's accession to the bar, a political revolution had taken place in Connecticut, which had displaced from office men who had long and honorably filled the stations of public trust in every branch of the government, and had put in their places untried, inexperienced, and, in many instances incompetent men. The greatest danger was apprehended in the organization of the Judiciary department under the Constitution which the party lately come into power had given the State. The Judges of the Court under the old system of government, were, without exception, eminent jurists, and of pure, unsullied character. It was hoped that some of them might be retained on the new Court; but they were nearly all dismissed from the public service, and it could not be denied that the Court, as constituted under the new order of things, was greatly inferior in ability, and far less possessed of the public confidence than the Court which it had superceded. Chief Justice Hosmer, the only jurist of any distinction retained on the bench, by indefatigable and exhausting labor, gave it some share of respectability; but it could not be concealed from the observation of the bar, that its decisions had lost much of the respect with which those of the old Court were regarded by the Courts of sister States, and in other countries where the common law is the rule of action.

To this state of things the attention of Mr. Smith, as his practice increased and his acquaintance with the new Court became familiar, was drawn with anxious solicitude, and it is quite probable that the important bearing that the politics of the State had upon the constitution of the Court, had a strong influence in shaping his conduct in relation to public affairs in the State. One prominent reason which he was in the habit of giving in explaining the depth of his interest in politics, was that he wanted a good Court. It may be proper to say here that this feeling, in the end, obtained a decided ascendancy in the State, and as vacancies in the Court occurred from time to time, they were filled by the appointment of such men as David Daggett, Roger M. Sherman, Thomas

S. Williams, Clark Bissell, William L. Storrs, and others their successors, who have done honor to their position, and raised the character of the Supreme Court of the State to its ancient eminence.

After a practice of some fifteen years in his profession, Mr. Smith had obtained an eminent position in the county, and had very great popularity with his political friends; in fact, he was the mentor spirit in all their party movements. Up to this time the eminent men of the county were a kind of privileged class, never mingling much with the common people, and known only by their occasional public performances. But Mr. Smith had a far different habit. He welcomed to his acquaintance and sympathy good men of all conditions in society, no matter how humble or obscure the man might be. In that way he became personally well known in every section of the county, and extensively throughout the State. Yet he never took advantage of his social position to obtain preferment for himself. He never packed a convention, never asked for a nomination for any place; never solicited the vote of any man, and never addressed a public assembly in a canvass when his own name was before the people for office. Whenever he gave his consent to receive a nomination at the hands of his friends, he had no competitor for the position. His weight of character, eminent fitness and great abilities, always marked him out as the man for the place, and his nominations were always made with great unanimity. He never failed of an election when he was a candidate, and was usually returned by a strong majority of his district. He was elected a representative from the town of Litchfield in the Legislature of Connecticut for the years 1831-32 and '34, and was a prominent leading member of the house during each of those years. His sagacious counsels were felt in all its deliberations, and had much to do in shaping its measures.

Up to this time, and for several years afterwards, Mr. Smith was engaged in professional employment. He never neglected this duty, however loud the call might be for him to engage in a political canvass. He was a complete master of the science of the law, and his practice was not confined to Litchfield county, but extended to other counties in the State. His manner of conducting trials was peculiar to himself. He was often severe and harsh in his cross-examination of witnesses, especially if he thought they practiced prevarication or dishonesty. He was not what might be called an easy, fluent speaker, but there was a power of thought and strength of argument which attended his oral deliveries which made him a popular advocate, and commanded the strict attention of the hearer.

There was probably no time after 1837 to the time of his election to the Senate, but that Mr. Smith could have held a seat in the House of Representatives of the National Congress, if he would have consented to be a candidate for the position. He was always the first man named for the place, when the matter was talked up among the members of the party; but the demands of clients for his professional services, and the desire that others should share the honors as well as the labors of the position, frequently caused his withdrawal from public life, but in no degree diminished his active labors in the cause which lay near his heart. In 1839, and again in 1841, he was elected to and served in the National House of Representatives. Up to that time the State of Connecticut was entitled to six members, and the county of Litchfield then formed the Sixth Congressional District. Under the apportionment made by the census of 1840, the number of members from Connecticut was reduced to four, and Fairfield and Litchfield counties formed the Fourth District. Mr. Smith was offered the nomination in 1843, for the consolidated district, but declined in favor of the Hon. Thos. B. Osborn, who had represented the Fairfield district during the four previous years. Mr. Osborn was defeated by Dr. Samuel Simons, of Bridgeport, and at that election, every district in Connecticut elected a democratic representative.

In 1844 Mr. Smith was one of the Electoral College of Connecticut, which gave the vote of that State for Henry Clay for President, but who was defeated by James K. Polk, who inaugurated a policy which Mr. Smith believed would prove disastrous to the country, and, in his opinion, subsequent results have fully justified his belief.

In 1845 Mr. Smith was nominated for congress in the consolidated district, and was elected by more than seven teen hundred majority over his competitor, John Cotton Smith, and this, in a district which two years before had given a democratic majority of one hundred and thirteen. At this election the State was completely revolutionized, every district having elected the Whig candidate by a very decided vote.

In 1847 Mr. Smith was reelected by a majority of more than one thousand votes over his democratic competitor; and this was his last term of service in the House of Representatives. During this congress the selection of a candidate for the Presidency, to be supported by the Whig party at the election in 1848 became a matter of great interest, and was attended with no little difficulty. Mr. Smith was a member of the National Whig Convention, at Philadelphia which nominated General Taylor; and although he was willing to support any candidate which the convention should propose, yet he gave it as his opinion from the beginning, that General Taylor was the strongest man for the place, and a majority of the convention concurred in this belief. Mr. Smith was chairman of the Whig committee which had in charge the management of the national canvass, and spent much of his time during its pendency in Washington, superintending the action of the party. In these labors he had the cooperation of Abraham Lincoln, who also was in Washington, as a colleague with Mr. Smith during a portion of the time. The efficiency and skill of Mr. Smith in conducting the campaign was acknowledged by all who took an interest in the issue.

In the mean time, the Legislature of Connecticut had elected Mr. Smith to the Senate of the United States for the term commencing with the administration of Gen. Taylor. Before he took his seat in the Senate, President Taylor offered him a seat in his Cabinet, as Secretary of the Interior, but he declined the proposed honor, and turned to his Senatorial position as a more appropriate field for him to occupy in the public service. He continued an active, honored and efficient member of that distinguished body until the 24th day of May, 1854, when, for reasons which he deemed imperative upon himself, he resigned his seat, and has not since been in public life.

Of both branches of the National Congress Mr. Smith was an influential member. On every subject to which they were devoted, his speeches contained a great amount of statistical and historical information, and were read with great interest by men of all parties. He was also very successful in harmonizing discordant views among the members of his own party, and in procuring their united action on measures of policy agitated in Congress.

During his term of service in the Senate, besides participating occasionally in debates on minor matters, he addressed to that body able and effective speeches on the subjects following:—

1. On removals from office, delivered March 21 and 23, 1850.
2. On the compromise measures proposed by the Committee of which Mr. Clay was Chairman, delivered July 8, 1850.
3. On the French Spoliation—February 16 and 17, 1851.
4. On the proposition of Mr. Douglass to authorize a levy of tonnage duties by the States for the improvement of rivers and harbors—August 23, 1852.
5. On the construction of a railroad from Missouri to the Pacific coast.—February 17, 1850.
6. On the Nebraska question.—February 10 and 11, 1854.

All those speeches were fraught with good sense and sound logic. That of February, 1854, on the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, expressed the full conviction of its author that the measure foreboded incalculable mischief to the country, and he felt bound to oppose to it an uncompromising resistance. In this, his last speech, Mr. Smith undertook to demonstrate that there was and ever had been, an entire harmony in the elements on which the prosperity of the different sections of the Union depended ; that there was an utter impracticability of maintaining an equilibrium between the free and slave States, and how useless such an equilibrium, if attainable, would be to the latter, and that the various slavery questions which, during the few preceding years had made such a disturbance in and out of Congress, were of very inconsiderable importance. Mr. Webster complimented Mr. Smith with the remark that he had succeeded perfectly in the effort.

In the fall of 1854 Mr. Smith removed his residence to Stamford, Fairfield county, with the view to open an office in the city of New York, for the practice of law, which he did accordingly, and was so engaged till the fall of 1872, when he retired, except as to two cases before the Supreme Court of the United States, one of which is still pending.

- 144. HENRY, b. December 10, 1783, d. July 21, 1834.

The first three were born at Waterbury, the last four at New Haven.

When his father the Rev. Mark, went to Canada, as Chaplain in the French war of 1760, he is supposed to have accompanied his father, and to have held the office of Lieutenant. He was a Captain in the army of the Revolution, and was undoubtedly at Ticonderoga in the spring and summer of 1777, when the fort was abandoned by Gen. St. Clair.

It appears in Hinman's Historical Collection on Conn., in the Revolution, p. 516, that "Capt. Jesse Leavenworth, of New Haven, under proper orders, gave his deposition respecting the "evacuation of Ticonderoga. The pay table were directed to "settle Capt. Leavenworth's account, etc." This was in Legislative session, January 19, 1778.

I am indebted to the Hon. Frederick J. Kingsbury, of Waterbury, a descendant of Col. Jesse, for the following sketch of him :—

Col. Jesse was the only child of his mother, and was twelve years older than the oldest of his half-brothers. He was graduated at the age of nineteen, and married several months before he attained his majority, and the family tradition is, that they were spoken of as the handsomest couple ever seen at the church in New Haven. All the sons of Rev. Mark appear to have been superior men, both physically and intellectually, taking rank among the foremost wherever they went. For a few years after Col. Jesse's marriage, he lived in Waterbury, carrying on various kinds of business, and at one time keeping a hotel which stood at the corner of Center Square and North Main street, nearly on the ground now occupied by the Citizen's Bank, the building fronting on North Main street.

In February, 1767, he bought a place in New Haven and soon after moved his family there. He soon engaged in commercial affairs, and in Trowbridge's History of Long Wharf, in vol. 1 N. H. Hist. Society papers, his name appears among the most liberal contributors to that enterprise. There was almost no money to be had in those days, and he heads the first list with a subscription of "one hundred bushels of salt," and appears always as a liberal contributor on succeeding lists.

He was a Lieutenant in the "Governor's Foot Guards," the distinguished military company of the State, and of which his neighbor, Benedict Arnold, was Captain. When the news of the battle of Lexington reached New Haven, in the early spring of 1775, Arnold called out his company and asked for volunteers. Forty went—Leavenworth with them. They marched by Pomfret, taking "old Put" along. When they reached camp at Cambridge, their dress and drill were so superior that they were at once detailed to deliver the body of a British officer who had died, and their soldier-like appearance was much admired by the British party whom they met on this occasion. At the end of about three weeks Leavenworth and the company returned. Arnold remained, and began here his career of honor and shame.

Leavenworth's house in those days, was on the water side of East Water street, a little eastward of the site afterwards known as the Pavilion Hotel. In high tides the water came up almost to the rear of the house, and here, during the Revolution, some marauding British soldiers landed, and finding Madame L. alone they robbed the house of such valuables as they could carry, and destroyed other property, ripping open feather beds and emptying them into the sea; also taking the silver buckles out of her shoes, while she stood by and gave them, as she used to say, "a piece of her mind."

She had a keen black eye, and a sharp tongue, and in after years, perhaps not without sufficient cause, she turned it on her husband with such efficacy that he sought shelter in the wilds of Vermont. About 1783 he became alienated from her, and, taking the younger children with him, he left her forever. There may have been fault on both sides, but apparently it was mainly on his, and his memory must bear the blame. He took a woman with him who had been an inmate of the family, and whom he afterwards married, some sort of a divorce having been obtained.

He went first to Caledonia, and at once became a prominent man in that part of the country. He was one of the patentees of the towns of Danville and Peacham, October 27, 1786, and soon settled in Danville on or near the old Hazen military road which runs through the west part of the town. He built mills at West Danville, at the mouth of Joe's pond, and engaged in various other enterprises. He was a member of the Legislature in 1789-91-92 and '98.

He was apparently one of those pioneers of civilization who do more for others than themselves; for though a planner of many enterprises and not wholly unsuccessful he was probably too sanguine and large-minded for his means; at any rate he does not seem to have accumulated much property. He died at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., whither he had moved some years before Dec. 12, 1824, having moved there on account of his son, Gen. Henry, being at the time stationed there.

While living at New Haven, he took a very prominent and active part in all public affairs. The "Old" or "Red Rock Ferry," was for nearly one hundred and thirty years the only means of communication between New Haven and East Haven and vicinity. Increasing population and business demanded another ferry, and in 1780 Leavenworth's Ferry was incorporated by a grant to Jesse Leavenworth from the General Assembly. It was the shortest route to the business center of New Haven from East Haven, and drew a large portion of the travel for many years, and until in 1791 the bridge over the Quinipiac at Dragon, now Fair Haven, was erected.

Born May 26, 1752. Graduated at Yale College in 1771; was a lawyer in New Haven.

Married Mrs. — Sherman, widow of William, son of Roger Sherman, the signer of the Declaration of Independence. He went to France with Joel Barlow, U. S. Minister to that country, and died in Paris in 1812, leaving no children.

They resided for a time in France, and afterwards in Canandaigua, N. Y., where he died Nov. 2, 1812. (Turner's Phelps & Gorham Purchase, p. 150.)

2. The second part outlines the specific procedures and protocols that must be followed when recording transactions. This includes details on how data should be collected, stored, and reviewed to ensure its integrity and accuracy.

3. The third part addresses the role of the management team in overseeing the record-keeping process. It stresses that management must ensure that all staff are properly trained and that the necessary resources are provided to support the system.

4. The fourth part discusses the importance of regular audits and reviews to identify any discrepancies or areas for improvement. It suggests that these should be conducted at regular intervals and by independent parties to maintain objectivity.

5. The fifth part concludes by reiterating the overall goal of the document: to establish a robust and reliable system for recording and managing organizational data. It encourages all stakeholders to work together to achieve this goal.

He went to London with Joel Barlow in 1798, and thence to Paris. Here he lived for years in great splendor and prosperity. But eventually he was, as reported, ruined financially by some change of government officers, by the new officers refusing to perform a large contract for iron, made with their predecessors. This, no doubt, was at or about the time of the fall of Napoleon.

He was a member of a Committee appointed by the Legislature of Connecticut, from various parts of the State, to secure relief for the army under Washington. This was in the latter part of 1776 and early part of 1777.

family, from Dr. Thomas, of Ripton, down, with whose name, residence and business he was not familiar. He furnished a large part of the facts for the Genealogical Tree published in 1840, and made by William and E. W. Leavenworth; and but for him, it is not probable that this genealogy of the family would ever have been written, for this work was commenced only to revise, correct and enlarge that.

The house called the Old Trumbull House was formerly the residence of the Rev. John Trumbull, of Watertown, about a mile below the village, on the Waterbury road. It was the place of birth of John T., his son, the author of McFingal. See a wood cut of it in Barber's Hist. Collection of Conn.

He lived in the enjoyment of a serene and quiet old age, with the partner of his youth, and died, I am sure, at peace with the world and his God. He was a millwright, and built mills in various places, far and near, in early life. He lived at Oxford, Conn. in 1808, and in 1812 moved to Towanda, Penn., from Shephard's Brook, in Hamden.

Abel L. was a carpenter, settled in northeast part of Charlotte, Vt., when a wilderness with only paths and marked trees for eight miles to the lake. He built a grist and saw mill on the La Plot river. The stones for the grist mill were obtained from flint rocks found in Charlotte, and were worked out by his brother Gideon, who came on from Connecticut for that purpose. His dam was finally swept away by floods; he sold his farm and worked at his trade. The mill stones were purchased by Gen. Nathan Leavenworth, and put in a mill built by him on Lewis Creek river, in the southeast part of Charlotte.

He was a man of energy and skill in his trade, and of integrity of character. He died at Middlebury, Vt. January 25, 1813, where he was engaged in building a large mill, and whither he had removed his family from New Haven Vt., where he owned a farm. Capt. Gideon Leavenworth was the second son of Edmund and Abigail Leavenworth (nee Beardsley), and grandson of Dr. Thomas Leavenworth, was born October 18, 1751, at Huntington, then in the parish of Ripton, Connecticut. In the old cemetery near the Episcopal church rest the remains of all these ancestors.

Gideon was undoubtedly religiously trained, and is known to have been a member of the church in Ripton, under Rev. Dr. Ely and is believed to have been a true christian.

He was long remembered among his acquaintance for his kindness and generosity, and for the spirit of christian submission and patience with which he bore a confinement of two years and a half, toward the close of his life, from painful rheumatic affection. His children remember his conducting family worship in the old Puritan style, standing at the back of a chair, before he was disabled by his final sickness.

He was a member of the Masonic Institution, but was heard to remark to a brother mason during his sickness, "Ah, brother Tomlinson, masonry never did you and me any good."

He was a man of great energy of character, full of business activity, large-hearted, liberal and kind to the poor. From his own ship-yard, which was directly between his house, (which he built himself,) and the Hoosatic river, he built and launched eighteen or nineteen vessels. He owned a saw-mill, which stood on a small stream which joined the Hoosatic, just north of his house, and was largely engaged in the timber business besides a distillery and a large farm on which were apple and peach orchards, and of course had at all times a large number of men in his employ, never refusing the application of any poor fellow who wanted work and wages.

His first marriage was October, 20, 1779, to Sarah Ward of Stratford, Connecticut. Their children were two sons and four daughters viz. Abijah, Hezekiah, Nancy, Sally, Betsy and Fanny. The last three are still living, and could doubtless relate many things about him.

His second wife was the widow of Dr. Amzi Hull of Woodbridge, Connecticut, [nee Mary Ann Kasson at Bethlehem.] She had one surviving child, Aratus Bevil Hull who was afterwards tutor in Yale College, and was then Pastor of the Old South Church in Worcester, Massachusetts, till his death in 1816.

The children of this second marriage, were four sons and two daughters, viz: Mark Eli, Gideon Hull, name forgotten, Mary Ann, Sophia Amanda, and Gideon. Mark is living in Newtown, Conn. Mary Ann has been a teacher for forty-five years, most of the time in Westport, Conn., where she now resides.

Gideon Leavenworth died April 19, 1816, and was buried in the old grave yard on the White Hills, on the road from his home to Ripton, where are also buried his two wives, and some of his children.

He lived on the banks of the Hoosatic, some two miles above Birmingham, near and just above the residences of his father and grandfather. The house he built is large and spacious, and still remains.

Early in life he was engaged in the war of the Revolution, and was afterwards (1798) a representative of the town of Huntington in the legislature. He commanded a company at the battle of White Plains. He was extensively engaged in lumbering, building bridges, vessels, etc. He rebuilt Leavenworth's Bridge, just above his house, and he and his father first erected it about 1868-9. He suffered much from rheumatism, brought on by exposure and his wounds during the war. He possessed an ample property with large orchards, and sent to market large quantities of fruit and lumber.

He was hospitable, fond of entertaining his friends, particularly clergymen and religious people. He was not only a member of the Congregational church at Ripton, but was active and exemplary. He was on intimate terms with his pastor, the Rev. David Ely, and confided his will to his care. The last year of his life he devoted largely to the reading of the Scriptures "The Afflicted Man's Companion," and "Baxter's Saint's Rest."

His second wife, Mrs. Mary Ann Hull, had in two years lost her husband and three children, and when she married Capt. Gideon had but one child, Aratius Bevil Hull.

I learn from Charles J. Hoadley, Esq., of Hartford, State Librarian—to whom I am indebted for so many other facts—that "Major Eli Leavenworth served in the Connecticut line of the Continental army from the commencement of the war till January first, 1781."

Several of the accounts against the State rendered by him at different periods are found in the Comptroller's Office, at Hartford—one from July, 1775 to June, 1776, £1.048. 11. 0—one from July, 1777 to March, 1779, for £1.204. 19. 6—one in March 1781, for £75.

It appears by the records in the Comptroller's office, that he served as a Captain in the Connecticut line of the Continental army, in the Sixth Regiment, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Return J. Meigs, from January 1, 1777 till September of the same year, when he was promoted and served as a Major in the same regiment till January 1, 1781. In 1775 and '76 he served as Captain of the Tenth Company of the Seventh Regiment of the Connecticut line. Capt. Eli and his company were attached to Col. Meigs' regiment, and stationed at Horse Neck in 1777. On the twenty-ninth and thirtieth of October of that year, he was detailed with others and went to Wright's Mills, Westchester county, N. Y., to look after the Cow Boys and Tories who infested that part of the country. They were very successful and returned to Horse Neck November 1. "Hinman's Hist. Collection on Connecticut in the Revolution.

The same work, p. 511, contains the following notice of him :

NEW HAVEN, January 14, 1778.

Thursday the Green Coats taken near Tarrytown, N. Y., passed through New Haven, fifty-two in number, under guard, on their way to Hartford, twenty-seven of whom were taken by Capt. Eli Leavenworth, who, with a party of twenty-seven, surrounded more than thirty of the enemy and killed three, wounded three or four. Among the prisoners was the noted Captain Barnes, and his Lieutenant, Hunt, a New Yorker. Capt. Eli had one man slightly wounded.

He was a man of much more than ordinary intelligence, activity and capacity for business. He was kind and benevolent and possessed of great personal popularity. He was elected Selectman of the Town of Huntington for thirteen successive years. Never were the poor of the Town, more carefully cared for. He was genial and warm hearted and strongly attached to his friends and was familiarly known as "Uncle Ed." Probably no man in the town was so generally known. He had a splendid constitution and great muscular power, and was fond of active sports, horse-racing, jumping, hunting, etc., often going to Long Island and bringing home one or more deer. But he was by no means an idler. He was largely engaged in cutting and hauling timber, building bridges, wharves and vessels at his boat yard. He employed in these various works great numbers of men.

He took great pride in fine horses and cattle and no one had better, or was a superior judge. His judgment was quiet and accurate.

He lost two sloops by French Privateers which are covered by the "French Spoliation Bill."

He had great force and pith of expression, and "Uncle Ed" is still often quoted for his pithy remarks, anecdotes and expressions.

His language was a little rough and unpolished and often not very refined, but partaking of the character of those with whom he was much engaged. But there was a religious sentiment within him, handed down, no doubt, from his father and his grandfather, who was Deacon in the First Congregational church at Huntington, and at the close of his life, at his request, his name was enrolled among the members of the Episcopal church in Derby, where he then lived, and in that communion he died.

The following characteristic story of "Uncle Ed." is told by some recent traveler on the Hoosatic, and is cut from a casual newspaper, by the author. Perhaps it is a little too broad to do perfect justice to him, for he was a very kind and benevolent man, and a good and popular citizen :—

The long "Red House" now standing at Leavenworth Landing on the west of Ousatic Lake, is among our Derby recollections. It was once a favorite "stopping house" between the two counties, when the place was full and lively in ship-building, and thousands flocked thither on a day when a vessel was to be launched. After Leavenworth Bridge, which spanned the river a few rods above, became rickety and unsafe for travel, a sort of public ferry was kept up opposite this "Red House." A blunt, sensible, burly Yankee, familiar to some of our readers in his old age, by the name of "Uncle Ed," solicited as ferryman. On one of these occasions he was aroused from his midnight slumbers by a signal of distress to ferry over a friend from the opposite side. The river was high, the night dark and rainy, and the wind blowing a perfect gale.

With great effort "Uncle Ed" reached the Derby shore when his tallow candle went out, leaving him in bad humor, and he exclaimed "Who the h—l are you? out this time of night when honest men should be asleep? It is enough to make a minister swear to turn out for a friend such a time as this!" The traveler said not a word but, carefully got himself, horse and wagon, on board when he was told: "now take hold of this rope and pull like the d—l, or we shall go down stream." The order was religiously obeyed, while the ferryman continued his strain of epithets clothed not in the choicest English. Safely over, "Uncle Ed" demanded an extra ninepence, if his friend refused to give his name. "Why," said the stranger, "the man towards whom you have been using such abusive language is your reverend minister from Huntington Center." Oh! yes, parson, I've heard you preach a good many times, but I guess I won't take back anything I've said.

Although but twelve years of age in 1777, when his father, Capt. Edmund, was ordered to Fairfield with his company, he volunteered to go as a private, and served as a waiter to his father during the campaign, joining the company April 2, 1777, as a volunteer private. When his father was again ordered out with his company and sent to New Haven in 1779, his son Edmund again enlisted as a private in his father's company, and accompanied him in the campaign.

All this appears by his own affidavit, made December 13, 1837, in applying for a pension under the act of June 7, 1832. The affidavit is now on file in the War Department at Washington.

Upon the formation of the first military company in town, in 1788, he was chosen a Lieutenant, the number of men in town not entitling it to a company organization. In 1789, however, he was appointed Captain, and in acknowledgement of the honor, invited the whole town to dine with him.* He subsequently arose to the rank of Brigadier-General.

He represented Hinesburg in the State Legislature in 1796, 1799, 1800, 1802, 1803, 1804, 1805, 1806, 1809, 1810, 1811, 1812, 1813, 1815, 1817, 1818, 1821, 1822, 1827, and 1828; was two years in the State Senate, two years, 1831 and 1832, in the Governor's Council; a Presidential Elector in 1833, and at different times filled every town office, from constable up. In 1824 he was one of the original trustees of the Hinesburg Academy, and in 1822 he was a member of the Constitutional Convention.

He was a man remarkable for his integrity, benevolence and kindness of heart. He was tall, dignified, and, in the latter years of his life, venerable in his appearance.

After a most active and useful life of more than sixty years, spent in the town of Hinesburg, filling all the offices in their gift, he died universally respected, beloved and mourned, in the month of September, 1849. Probably no person in this country, who has borne the family name, has been more often and highly honored—more universally respected and beloved, and more unimpeachable in his character and life.

The Historical account of Hinesburg, prepared by the Rev. C. E. Ferrin for the "Vermont Historical Magazine," has the following biographical notice of Gen. Nathan Leavenworth:—

"Gen. Leavenworth was a native of New Milford, Conn., and came to Hinesburg with his father, in 1787, at the age of twenty-three years. He was among the pioneers of the town, and made it his home for three score years. His early life having been spent among the stirring scenes and patriotic struggles of the Revolution, of which, though a mere boy, he was an intelligent and interested observer, his character was formed on the best model of those times. He showed in many ways, the reality and the strength of his regard for his country. He was never absent from the polls at the annual State election, from his first residence in town up to his last sickness. The Rev. O. S.

Hoyt thus spoke of him in a sermon, the Sabbath after his burial :—

'As a member of this community for sixty-two years, how many and conspicuous were the social virtues he exercised! How high a degree of moral worth did he unfold! What an example did he furnish, of enterprise, industry, prudent economy, contentment, meekness, sincerity, truthfulness, affability, kindness, liberality, honesty. His integrity was proverbial. His business transactions were extensive, but I have yet to learn that he ever resorted to the litigations of the law for their final and full adjustment. His distinguished worth did not go unappreciated; he received from this community, and from his fellow citizens at large, unequivocal tokens of their confidence. From 1796 to 1830, he was chosen at twenty-one [20] different times, representative in the Legislature. He was, with emphasis, the man whom the people delighted to honor. He was a member of the Senate of Vermont two years, and once an elector from Vermont of the President and Vice-President of the United States. And when we contemplate his history in the more domestic relations he sustained, how much rises to view most commendable and worthy of imitation.

But there are other and higher grounds of interest in him. In the year 1831 he was led to feel, as never before, that no external morals, however elevated, no amiability of native disposition, no affections merely instinctive, did meet the whole demands of the Divine law. That momentous declaration of the Savior, 'Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God,' came, with a new and mighty power, home to his soul. He publicly avowed his confidence in the Savior, and his supreme attachment to him, by connecting himself with the Episcopal church. Still, he was most free and liberal in aiding us in sustaining all the institutions of the gospel among the people. (There was no Episcopal church in Hinesburg.) There was nothing sectarian in his spirit, or in his efforts; he loved all who bore the image of the Savior. With them he was at home, and around the communion table, in social conference, and in the prayer meeting, as well as in all the more public movements of the church. Punctually and habitually he honored the sanctuary. Humbly and prayerfully there, in the bible class, he studied the oracles of God. And at last, death had no terrors. He who is the resurrection and the life was his refuge, and he was at rest.' "

In 1837, he was settled over the only Presbyterian church then in Wisconsin. In the fall of 1839, he took charge of the first Presbyterian church of Milwaukee where he remained till 1841. He was then appointed General Agent of the American Home Missionary Society of Wisconsin. In this position he was active, influential and judicious, and remained in it seven years. He was the originator and most able defender of the plan of union between the Presbyterian and Congregational churches of Wisconsin, which has been so beneficial. He was mainly instrumental in founding both the College at Beloit, and the Theological Seminary at Chicago, and on his death the trustees of the College thus express their appreciation of his work:—

"We record our conviction that to the sagacity and wise, christian perseverance of our departed brother, this College, under God, pre-eminently is indebted, for its existence and the success of its early history, and in his removal we mourn the loss of a judicious counselor, and an efficient helper, and of a personal friend."

He died at Chicago on the 21st day of March, 1855, on his return from the east, where he had been actively engaged for his great enterprises, and was buried in the cemetery, on the same hill with the College, where a monument was erected to his memory by his many friends.

He studied medicine in Philadelphia, graduated in 1813; was appointed a surgeon in the war of 1812-15, by the General Government, and removed to Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., in 1818. Died September 19, 1863, at Cattaraugus, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. Mrs. L. died in Chicago at the residence of her son Alson E., on the 10th day of June, 1871.

304. ALSON E., b. May 17, 1831, at Little Valley, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., m. Hannah M. Egert.

He commenced the practice of his profession in the village of Woodbury in 1811, but in the fall of 1812 entered the University at Philadelphia, attended the last course of lectures delivered by the celebrated Dr. Rush, and was graduated in the spring of 1813, having been licensed to practice in Conn. in May, 1811. He returned to Woodbury and resumed his practice, and soon after received the appointment of surgeon in the Connecticut line of militia, and ordered into the service of the United States in the war then pending. But owing to the dispute between the State and General Government as to the right to appoint, he never acted under it.

In the spring of 1818, Dr. Leavenworth resolved to migrate to the Connecticut Reserve. Purchasing a yoke of cattle, and preparing a large covered wagon, properly fitted up, in June he bid farewell—then deemed a final farewell—to Connecticut, commenced his journey, and four weeks found him at Batavia, in the county of Genesee. There he halted to rest, became acquainted with the agents of the Holland Land Company, and under their advice changed his course towards Cattaraugus, and in about a week found himself at what is now the village of Ellicottville.

Here the Doctor unloaded his covered wagon, and, with Mrs. L., began the battle of life in the wilderness. His practice soon extended over the county of Cattaraugus, from the Pennsylvania line to that of the county of Erie.

On the 25th of January, 1823, he was appointed First Judge of the County Court of Cattaraugus County, which office he continued to hold till February 15, 1833, when he was succeeded by the Hon. Benjamin Chamberlin. He was also one of the Commissioners to erect the county buildings of Cattaraugus county, and to lay out the roads on the Allegany Indian Reservation. He was one of the original projectors of the Randolph Academy, and a liberal contributor to its funds.

The biographical sketch of Dr. L. in the history of Cattaraugus county by the Hon. John Manly, now (1873) an honored member of the Legislature from Cattaraugus county: which was published in 1857, thus concludes;—

"Judge Leavenworth by diligence, liberal economy and judicious investments is in possession of a competency. Long may he live to enjoy the fruits of his well filled cornucopia. Whoever has traveled on the New York and Erie Rail Road, has, of course, as the cars swept around the crescent at Cattaraugus Station noticed the elegant brick mansion resting on the southern edge of a hundred acres of table land, forming the handsomest plateau on the line of the road. That is the homestead of Judge Leavenworth—there he enjoys life, pets his fine herd, hospitably entertains his friends; can tell many a pleasant anecdote of the early pioneer life in the county; and there, as elsewhere, in his green old age, perhaps no man in the county is more sincerely esteemed."

Most of the facts above stated are taken by the author from said sketch by the Hon. Mr. Manly.

He had an extensive practice in his profession, and was usually in some official position. He was Supervisor of Ellicottville, Cold Spring, and New Albion, the three towns in which he resided at different times, and Loan Commissioner of the county. He was a gentleman of great integrity and kindness of heart, and possessed in a high degree the confidence, respect and affection of his fellow citizens.

They were all born at Leavenworth.

He died at Leavenworth September 12 or 13, 1872, and was buried there on Sunday, the 15th.

Like most members of the family, he was a man of a large and vigorous frame, capable of great effort, both mental and physical. He was a man of excellent judgment, full of enterprise and sagacity. He was patient and persevering, and, therefore, in the end generally successful. He enjoyed during a long life, the confidence, respect and esteem of his fellow citizens, and died universally regretted.

In the Leavenworth Independent, of January 14, 1871, was published the following account of his "golden wedding":—

THE GOLDEN WEDDING.

A Half Century of Wedded Life—The Dinner, Speech, Supper and Presents—A Rare Occasion and a Splendid Time.

The first Golden Wedding ever celebrated in Crawford county, took place at the residence of Mr. Oliver Leavenworth, near this place on Wednesday evening last. The parties celebrating their fiftieth anniversary of wedded life, were Mr. Zebulon Leavenworth, aged seventy-nine years, and his wife Margaret, aged sixty-nine. At the dinner party given on Wednesday at noon, to the members of the family and a number of the old citizens of the place, Mr. Leavenworth arose, and in a voice full of feeling and emotion, gave a brief history in verse of the life of himself and wife during the past fifty years. The poem was full of pathos and sublime thoughts, and when the aged gentleman resumed his seat, every eye was suffused with tears. Below we give the address of Mr. Leavenworth in full:—

LADIES, GENTLEMEN, AND CHILDREN,—

I have the gratifying pleasure to say to you all that my wife and I have lived happily together for fifty years, and there never has an angry word passed between us, and I hope you may all have the same pleasing intelligence to communicate to us. You all know that I am not an orator, and for that reason I thought that I would recite a few lines, in a conversation with my wife, which might suit the present occasion as well as anything else that I could say to you at this time. I will call it a short history of our journey through life:—

Fifty years through shine and shower,
Fifty years, my gentle wife,
You and I have walked together,
Down the rugged road of life.
From the hill of Spring we started,
And through all the Summer land,
And the fruitful Autumn country,
We have journeyed hand in hand.

We have borne the heat and burden,
 Willingly, painfully and slow,
 We have gathered in our harvest
 With rejoicing long ago.
 Leave the upland for our children,
 They are strong to sow and reap;
 Through the quiet, wintry lowlands,
 We our level way will keep.

'Tis a dreary country, darling,
 You and I are passing through,
 But the road lies straight before us,
 And the miles are short and few.
 No more dangers to encounter,
 No more hills to climb, true friend,
 Nothing now but simple walking
 Till we reach our journey's end.

We have had our time of gladness;
 'Twas a proud and happy day:
 Ah! the proudest of our journey,
 When we felt that we could say
 Of the children God has given us,
 Fondly looking on the six.—
 "Lovely women are our daughters,
 And our sons are noble men."

We have had our time of sorrow—
 Our time of anxious fears,
 When we could not see the milestones
 Through the blindness of our tears.
 In the sunny Summer country,
 Far behind us little Zebie, Thaddie,
 And Marshall, too, grew weary,
 And we left them on the way.

Are you looking backward, mother,
 That you stumble in the snow?
 I am still your guide and staff, dear,
 Lean your weight upon me—so.
 Our road is growing narrow,
 And—what is that you say?
 Yes, I know your eyes are dim, dear.
 But we have not lost our way.

Cheer thee, cheer thee, faithful hearted,
 Just a little way before
 Lies the great Eternal City
 Of the King that we adore.
 I can see the shining spires,
 And the King—the King, my dear;
 We have served him long and humbly—
 He will bless us—never fear.

Ah! the snow falls fast and heavy;
 How you shiver with the cold;
 Let me wrap your mantle closer,
 And my arm around you fold.
 We are weak and faint and weary,
 And the sun's low in the west;
 We have reached the gate, my darling,
 Let us tarry here and rest.

Mr. L. (from whom the town of Leavenworth derived its name) first settled in this country in 1821, and since that time he has been engaged in business in this place, either in the mercantile trade or farming. Mr. L. and his lady are both in excellent health, and bid fair to live to celebrate their diamond wedding, twenty-five years hence.

Of the relatives present at the celebration there were Oliver Leavenworth and wife, Elias Leavenworth and wife, of this place; Edward Sullivan and wife of Mt. Vernon, Jos. H. Thornton and wife, of Cincinnati; J. A. Lyon and wife, of this place, and Mrs. J. A. McCoon, of Staunton, Kansas.

There were also present about seventy-five invited guests, principally residents of the town. When the refreshments were announced the assembled guests formed in couples and marched past the venerable couple, shaking hands, congratulating, and wishing them a still longer lease of life. On arriving at the large and spacious dining room, we found there prepared a feast fit for kings.

It is useless to say that ample justice was done to the rich viands prepared for the occasion. The merry laughter of the happy party made the occasion a scene of beauty and splendor.

The presents to the aged pair were magnificent and very valuable, consisting of gold watches, cups, rings, pens and penholders, spectacles, etc., all of the purest gold and finest finish.

As the "wee sma' hours" of morning approached, the party dispersed to their homes to dream of golden weddings, long life, costly presents, and huge cakes. We wish the venerable couple yet a long life of usefulness and happiness.

May their last days be their best and pleasantest, and when their days of usefulness are ended here, may they find a happy resting place in that beautiful land, "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

When quite young his parents moved to New Haven. His father resided for some years in a house on the southward or water side of Water street, nearly opposite to the building known for many years as the "Pavillion Hotel". Jesse L. was engaged in commerce, and owned the ferry to East Haven, where Tomlinson's Bridge and Wharf now are, (Steamboat wharf). He once lost a sloop in Hurlgate laden with flax seed. He was Lieutenant in a militia company, of which Benedict Arnold was Captain. Frederick remembered when the company left for the American army at Cambridge, in 1775, and followed them to the outskirts of the town. The father returned not long after. The mother, was a resolute and fearless woman. When the British troops landed at New Haven, her husband was absent. She refused to leave the house, which stood directly by the water; the British sailors landed there, pillaged the house, took her silver buckles off her shoes, ripped open her feather beds and emptied them into the sea, while she took what revenge a woman could, by giving them "a piece of her mind."

She is said to have had, at times, a sharp tongue. Perhaps her husband found it so, for before Frederick was seventeen years of age, the father left the mother, taking with him a part of the children, and never returned. Frederick, being thus left to himself, and being desirous to assist his mother, shipped on board a vessel belonging to Capt. Helms, of New Haven. He made several voyages as mate and super-cargo, to the southern ports of the U. S., to the West India Islands, and to what was then called the "Spanish Main." On his last voyage he entered into the employment of a Scotch merchant named Anderson, in the Island of Trinidad, where he remained some time. A portion of this time he was several miles inland, on a small river, where for months he did not see a white face. He located some government lands, in connection with a brother-in-law of Anderson's, and proposed to make a permanent settlement; but he was attacked by the yellow fever, and his constitution so much affected that he did not anticipate an ultimate recovery. In this condition he embarked for home, hoping for nothing more than to die among his friends. He was greatly benefitted, however, by the voyage, and before long entirely recovered.

He pursued the study of medicine, first with a Dr. Phelps, at or near Danville, Vt., and afterwards with Dr. Isaac Baldwin, of Waterbury, his uncle by marriage, and a man of superior ability. He practiced a short time in connection with Dr. B. He then married and located in West Stockbridge, Mass. At the end of about two years, Dr. Baldwin having decided to leave Waterbury, Dr. Leavenworth returned to take his place, and practiced his profession for several years. He was considered skillful, and had especial repute for treating the diseases of children, more than ordinary knowledge of materia medica for those times, and much mechanical ingenuity. He was not fond, however, of the drudgery of practice, and probably through the influence of his brother Melines, who then resided in Georgia, he undertook various commercial adventures, dealing in horses, cotton, etc., or what was then known as "Southern trade." For some years his winters were spent in Georgia, and his summers with his family in Connecticut.

In 1811, he engaged in manufacturing in Waterbury, and subsequently in mercantile business in connection therewith. He did not entirely relinquish his southern trade, and at the close of the war of 1812, met with a severe loss by the fall in the price of cotton, in which he had invested somewhat largely. He was not, however, a man to be daunted by reverses, and he pursued his business with industry; but he had nothing more to do with southern trade. In 1827 he sold out his manufacturing interest, and thenceforward was engaged exclusively in mercantile business, mainly dealing in drugs and medicines. He, however, carried on farming somewhat extensively and successfully.

He held the office of post master in Waterbury for upwards of twenty years prior to his death. He was a man of extensive and varied knowledge, gained by reading and observation, and possessed of quick insight into men and things. He had a keen sarcastic wit, and a strong sense of humor. His opinions were deliberately formed, but were expressed decidedly, and held with much tenacity. Though very independent in his judgments and action, he was a man of quick sympathies, and prized the respect and esteem of his fellows. His religious opinions, very positively held, were not those of most of his friends and associates, and the writer of this sketch is of the opinion that a want of sympathy arising from this fact, was keenly felt by him, and probably resulted in his later years, in a certain studied disregard of some conventionalities, amounting to something like eccentricity.

For this notice of Dr. Frederick, I am again indebted to his grandson, the Hon. Frederick J. Kingsbury, of Waterbury.

For the following sketch of Mark Leavenworth, I am indebted to Bronson's History of Waterbury, where it will be found, p. 425.

"Mark Leavenworth was born in New Haven, August 31, 1774 and died in Waterbury September 5, 1849, aged 75 years. His father, Jesse Leavenworth, a graduate of Yale College, and a Captain in the Revolution, was a man of much enterprise, and previous to the war, was largely engaged (for the times), in the shipping interest. His mother, Catharine Leavenworth, was a woman of great spirit and firmness, as was instanced by her insisting on remaining at her residence during the invasion of New Haven by the British, while her husband was absent carrying their children to a place of safety, and when nearly all the inhabitants had fled. At the age of ten years, the subject of this notice removed with his father to the county of Caledonia, in Vermont, at which time there was not a white man living within thirty miles in the direction of Canada, and but one family within many miles of their residence. The father owned what are now the towns of Danville and Peacham.

Mark Twain

At the age of fourteen, becoming dissatisfied, he determined to return to Connecticut; he performed the journey on foot and alone; the distance was near three hundred miles. After his return to New Haven, he resided in the family of his Uncle, Mark Leavenworth, Esq., who sent him to a school, (Mansfield's) where he studied geometry, navigation, and surveying, intending to go to sea, an idea which he afterwards relinquished. Further than this, his school education was limited, being confined to reading, writing, geography, and a good knowledge of arithmetic. After leaving school he was engaged in mechanical pursuits. He was employed for a number of years with Jesse Hopkins, of Waterbury, in that branch of the silversmith business which was applied to making knee and shoe buckles.

Near the period of his majority, the fashions having changed, this branch of the business became worthless. At the age of 21 years he married Anna, daughter of Moses Cook, of Waterbury, a woman of placid temper, excellent sense, and great moral worth, and commenced life with no other capital than great energy, a determined will, and uncommonly industrious habits. They had seven children, six of whom arrived at the age of maturity, of whom the eldest two survive. After his marriage he engaged in the manufacture of axes and steelyards, and also the mountings of small arms, (guns), such as rainrods, barrels and bayonets. At this business he employed a number of hands until the year 1800. In the fall of that year he left for South Carolina and Georgia, with steelyards and axes. This was an adventure which at the time called forth more remark, and excited more wonder than the circumnavigation of the globe would in our day. In the year 1801, in company with his brother, Dr. Frederick Leavenworth, he collected a drove of mules in Vermont and New Hampshire, which were driven to South Carolina and Georgia. He continued in this business about five years. He returned in the Summers and employed himself in constructing one or more of Whitney's cotton gins. The gin was then a recent invention. After ceasing to go South, he commenced the manufacture of clocks, in which business he was for many years extensively engaged. In 1829, in addition to the clock business, he became interested with his son, B. F. Leavenworth, and his son-in-law, Green Kendrick, in the manufacture of gilt buttons. In 1835 he ceased to manufacture clocks, and engaged personally in the manufacture of gilt and cloth buttons, with his son-in-law, C. S. Sperry, which he continued till his death.

He was a pioneer in manufacturing in the town of Waterbury. By reading and observation he became a man of much intelligence. He was benevolent and public-spirited. He was a member of the Congregational church, with which he and his wife united in 1817. She died April 9, 1842.

1. The first part of the document is a list of the names of the persons who have been appointed to the various offices of the city government. The names are listed in alphabetical order, and each name is followed by the name of the office to which the person has been appointed.

In person Mr. Leavenworth was of middle stature, his frame compactly and firmly knit together, and his constitution good. Though not always fortunate in business, he was a man of untiring industry, and indomitable energy and perseverance. It was when laboring under embarrassment that these traits were most conspicuous. When others would have despaired, he saw reason for redoubled effort and more untiring application. Under a load that would have broken the back or crushed the spirit of an ordinary man, he moved with freedom and cheerfulness. If bad luck overtook him, he was always ready to try again, and never failed to find something to comfort him. When the storm came upon him in 1837, and he was obliged to yield, he consoled himself with the reflection that he stood it longer than the United States Bank, and, it may be, added that he recovered sooner.

Mr. Leavenworth had one of the kindest of hearts. He was well informed, sociable, sensible and shrewd. There was sometimes an archness, a dry humor in his remarks, particularly on character, which rendered his familiar conversation quite attractive.

144. Gen. Henry Leavenworth.¹—JESSE,⁴ MARK,³ THOMAS², THOMAS.¹

Born December 10, 1783, at New Haven, Conn. Removed in childhood, with his father, to Danville, Vt.

Married, first, ELIZABETH EUNICE MORRISON. Left Vermont for New York State, and obtained a divorce. He had two children by this marriage—a son and daughter. Studied law with Gen. Erastus Root, at Delhi.

Married, second, ELECTA KNAPP, daughter of Cyrus Knapp, of Delhi, N. Y., who died June 12, 1811, aged eighteen years, and twenty-five days, within a year after marriage, Married, third, HARRIET LOVEJOY, in the winter of 1813-14. She was of Blenheim, Schoharie Co.; born in 1791, and died at Barrytown, N. Y., September 7, 1854, aged sixty-three. His daughter Alida also died at Newburgh, where Mrs. L. lived after the death of the General, on the 29th day of January, 1839.

He was appointed Captain of the 25th Infantry, April 25, 1812, and Major of the 9th Infantry August 15, 1813. Commanded his regiment, and was brevetted Lieut.-Colonel for distinguished services at Chippewa, July 5, 1814. August, 1814, he commanded regiment and was brevetted Colonel, for distin-

Early in life he left Danville, went to Delhi, Delaware Co., N. Y., and commenced the study of law with Gen. Erastus Root, then the leading lawyer in that county, and afterwards Lieut.-Governor of the State. On being admitted to the bar, he formed a partnership with General Root, which continued until he received a Captain's commission, and entered the army in April, 1812.

He married his second wife, Electa Knapp, of Delhi, in the spring or summer of 1810, and she died within a year thereafter.

In leaving his profession he abandoned a large and lucrative practice, and the most flattering prospects.

It is stated in Gould's History of Delaware County, that he took with him from that county, four hundred and thirty men to the army, of whom twenty-eight only finally returned.

His merits were early appreciated by his superior officers, and on the 15th of August, 1813, he was appointed a Major in the 9th Infantry, and as such had command of that regiment and a part of the 22d, at the battle of Chippewa, on the 5th of July, 1814, and at the battle of Niagara, on the 25th of the same month. For his gallant services at Chippewa, he was brevetted Lieut.-Colonel in August, 1814; and for similar good conduct at Niagara, he was brevetted Colonel in November, 1814. It is stated in above history, that two horses were killed under him in those bloody battles. He was wounded and fell from his horse, from the effect of a spent ball. See Lossing's Field Book of the war of 1812, ps. 809-816, and onwards.

On returning from the war, and in the fall of 1815, he was elected by the people of Delaware to represent that county in the Legislature, where he became at once an active and influential member.

Being retained on the peace establishment, May 25, 1815, he was, in 1816 or '17, appointed Indian Agent for the northwestern territory, with his headquarters at Prairie du Chien. He left his wife and young daughter at the east, and after some years they joined him at Prairie du Chien, going by the way of New Orleans and St. Louis. At the latter place, they were met by fourteen Indians with a palanquin, sent by Col. L. for their escort on their journey of seven hundred miles through the then unbroken wilderness. Four of them carried the palanquin, five marched in front and five in the rear. Two stood as watchmen each night, and all were polite, kind and obliging. They arrived safely on the thirty-fourth day. She is said to have been the first white woman who traveled through the wilderness to that remote station.

Remaining in the army, he spent the remainder of his life in the valley of the Mississippi, guarding the frontiers from the hostile Indians. For a time he had charge of the school for infantry practice at Jefferson Barracks. He built Cantonment Leavenworth, on the Missouri, directly above and adjoining the city of Leavenworth—hence its name.

At the time of his death he was stationed at Fort Jessup, and his wife and daughter were with him, when he was not absent on expeditions against the Indians.

While on his last pursuit of the hostile Pawnees and Camanches, he was seized with a violent fever, it being in the month of July, and he died in the full possession of all his faculties, lying in his wagon, while the troops were halted upon the open prairie. He was taken to the camp on the False Washita, and was temporarily buried at a place called the Cross Timbers. He had the possession of his faculties to the last, and gave directions as to his affairs, expressing a particular desire that his remains might be taken to Delhi and buried there, for the reason that he was indebted to the people of Delaware for all that he had been in life. His remains were brought from their brief resting place by his wife, and arrived at Catskill on Friday, the 22 of March, 1835, under the care of Major Belknap, of the U. S. army, his intimate personal friend. The Delaware Dragoons met the remains at Catskill, and escorted them to Delhi.

On the 17th of March a public meeting of the citizens of Delhi was held, for the purpose of taking suitable action in relation to the funeral of General Leavenworth. Gen. Erastus Root, Hon. Charles Hathaway, and others, were appointed a committee of arrangements. A series of most flattering resolutions was passed at the meeting, and General Root was selected to deliver the address at his funeral, which took place at Delhi, on Saturday, the 23d day of March, in the presence of an immense concourse of the people of the county of Delaware, composed of his former clients, constituents, friends and admirers. The Rev. Mr. Fenn conducted the religious exercises. The eulogy pronounced by General Root was published in the papers of Delaware county, but the author has been unable to procure a copy. But, by the kindness of the Hon. Norwood Boune and the Hon. Charles Hathaway, of Delhi, he has been furnished with files of the papers of the day, and with a copy of the History of Delaware county, and with facts in relation to Gen. L.; and from these sources much of the above has been derived, and some of it from an article in said history on Gen. L. and his wife, by a daughter of E. B. Fenn, Esq., of Delhi.

General Leavenworth was, by nature, endowed with great activity, energy and power. He was a polished gentleman, a public spirited and patriotic citizen, a reliable friend, and faithful in the performance of all the duties of life. He had in a few years greatly won the confidence and love of the people of Delaware county, and died by them universally respected, beloved, honored and mourned.

His remains were deposited in the old cemetery at Delhi, and his regiment erected to his memory a beautiful white marble monument, twelve feet high—the "Broken Column."

All born at Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y.

He was a physician in early life and studied his profession with Dr. Isaac Baldwin, of Waterbury, Conn., who married Sarah, daughter of Rev. Mark Leavenworth, of Waterbury.

After he was admitted to practice, he spent a year more or less, at Torrington—probably in 1793. After his marriage he spent a year at Roxbury, at the solicitation and by the advice of General Hinman, father of the late Ralph Hinman, of Hartford

Secretary of State of Conn. He then turned his steps west, and in 1795 went as far as Canandaigua, but returned and settled at New Canaan, Columbia county, N. Y. Here he injured his health in the duties of a large country practice, and about 1798-9 was made State printer, through the influence of his friends, Elisha Williams, Jacob Rutger Van Renselaer, and others, and he went to Albany and formed the firm of Leavenworth & Whiting, booksellers and stationers, and did business on the north-west corner of State and North Pearl streets, under the shade of the still existing and celebrated old Elm.

A change of politics deprived him of the State printing in 1802-3, and in the last year he returned to Canaan, and in 1805-6 settled at Great Barrington, Mass., and went into the business of a merchant with his youngest brother Isaac, under the firm of D. & I. Leavenworth. Here he spent the residue of his life, in the business of a merchant.

He was a man of high personal character; an active and consistent member of the Congregational church; of unquestioned integrity; great firmness of purpose, and strong, active and vigorous powers of mind. He was energetic and public spirited and took a prominent part in every enterprise for the improvement of the town.

He was repeatedly a member of the Legislature in the high political time of 1812-13, etc., and for many years before his death was the Moderator of the town. On the 18th of June 1819, he was appointed one of the Justices of the peace within and for the county of Berkshire, for seven years from that date "if he shall so long behave himself well in said office". The commission was signed by John Brooks, Governor, and Alden Bradford, Secretary of the Commonwealth, etc., and the oath was taken by and before Moses Hopkins, (son of the celebrated Dr. H.) and Gen. John Whiting, thereunto empowered by a "Didimus potestatem."

He had a farm about, and near to, his residence at Great Barrington, which he greatly enjoyed, and to which he devoted much of his time and thought. He was often a competitor for prizes at the Berkshire Agricultural Society, not only on his farm, but on his cattle and sheep, and frequently successful. He took much pride and pleasure in all matters connected with his farm. He was also very fond of horticulture, and several acres of ground about his residence were always filled with the choicest varieties of apples, pears, peaches and plums, and in the greatest abundance. And yet, notwithstanding these various demands upon his attention, his leisure was largely devoted to choice books with which his library was at all times liberally supplied.

His life was one of great activity and usefulness and he died in the full enjoyment of the love and respect of his neighbors and fellow citizens, and with perfect trust in the mercy of his Savior.

Isaac Leaveworth

158. Isaac Leavenworth.²—Asa⁴, THOMAS,³ THOMAS², THOMAS.¹

Born June 17, 1781, at Watertown, Conn.

Married ANN LEE October 15, 1811. She was born at Pittsfield, Mass., November 11, 1792, and died at Wolcott, N. Y., January 24, 1861. He died at Wolcott, N. Y., February 29, 1860. She was the daughter of Dr. Jonathan Lee, and Mabel Little, of Pittsfield, Mass., and Salisbury, Conn.

CHILDREN.

363. CAROLINE EMILY, b. August 27, 1812, at Great Barrington, Mass.

364. ELISHA LEE, b. September 20, 1814, at Great Barrington, Mass., d. November 16, 1860, at Wolcott, N. Y.

Isaac Leavenworth was a gentleman of uncommon merits. He was active, energetic, sagacious and successful in his business enterprises; frugal and prudent in his personal expenses: kind, liberal and benevolent towards the poor and afflicted; remarkably public spirited and generous in all enterprises aiming at the public good. What he accumulated by the exercise of one class of virtues, was expended in doing good through another class. His whole life was that of an active, cheerful, liberal christian gentleman.

Some years before his death, he sent for the author, to draw his will, by which he proposed to leave liberal bequests for the benefit of the people of Wolcott, and of the Presbyterian church, of which he was long an active, liberal and exemplary member. The author advised him not to make any will, which seemed superfluous, but, as he was in good health, to administer upon his estate himself, and do in his lifetime what he proposed to provide for by his will. He accepted of the advice, and the result was, that at his own expense he built a commodious and tasty Lecture Room for the church, at an expense of some fifteen hundred dollars; he purchased a lot for a parsonage at a cost of five hundred dollars, upon which his widow, after his death, built a parsonage at an expense of some two thousand dollars; he conveyed to the Society a block of three stores in the village of Wolcott, for the support of the Society after his death, and gave to them, also, a small cemetery, which he had laid out for the convenience of the village. He also joined with the citizens, and paid one-half of the expense of building the "Leavenworth Institute," and furnishing the library and chemical and philosophical apparatus, in order that it might be taken under the care of the Board of Regents. This was an academical institution at the village of Wolcott, and was so named by the citizens, out of compliment to his liberality.

He lived to a good old age, still active and full of good works, and died at Wolcott February 29th 1860, universally respected and beloved.

He was a member of the Legislature from the county of Wayne in the year 1849. A gentleman who had been spending some weeks at Wolcott on his return home, published the following sketch of Mr. L.:—

"Of all the men Wolcott has ever known Hon. Isaac Leavenworth claims, obtains, retains and maintains the first place in the affection of her inhabitants and he has spent a life of energy and uprightness in the advancement of her comforts and interests. If a poor man wants aid in business Mr. Leavenworth is not appealed to in vain; if a poor man is sick and in distress Mr. Leavenworth will find him out and assist him. If a merchant or master mechanic finds business drags Mr. Leavenworth counsels him as a friend, cheers him by his advice and assists him by his support, bids him keep up a brave heart and all will be well. If a public benefit is mooted, Mr. Leavenworth heads the list with a liberal contribution. Look at the splendid new church the Presbyterians have; look at the very nice academy just about completed. They both owe their existence and completion to his pecuniary aid. Not only in such enterprises is he found active; smaller things for the benefit of the community occupy his attention. If a town pump wants repairing he don't solicit subscriptions but does it himself at his own expense. Turn where you will you see evidences of his generosity, enterprise and public spirit, and where is his reward? Go and ask every citizen of Wolcott and you can't find a man of any character but has a fellow feeling in his bosom for Hon. Isaac Leavenworth. We never knew till this visit that one man could so wholly engross the good will of a whole village as does this gentleman. We were delighted to find that the people so generally appreciated his worth and we sincerely hoped that every rich man could walk through his own village amid so much love and respect, and feel the happiness of dispensing the bounties which God has showered upon them during their life time, instead of waiting till after death, when there is no choice but to leave their riches behind. Never did we more realize the text "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of these little ones, ye do it unto me." Nor that great commandment of our Savior's, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

By his own labor at fourteen, he purchased a yoke of steers and helped clear the eighty acres of his brother Meigs. His mother resided with him, for the most part, till her death. His house was always a home for all the family. For a few years in early life, he was a marble manufacturer at the old mill site of his father's. He then purchased of his father-in-law, the old farm of his father's, where he was born, and afterwards re-sold it to Mr. H., and purchased a farm in Madrid, N. Y., where he resided twelve years, till 1844, enjoying the confidence and respect of the community, when, on account of the health of his family, he returned to Charlotte, and finally re-purchased the old farm of his father's, on which he still resides, enjoying the good-will of all his neighbors, and often holding places of trust and honor, but declining a seat in the Legislature, as not suited to his tastes and pursuits.

After the death of his first wife in 1819, he married Mary Elizabeth Joslyn, April 10, 1851, at Charlotte, widow of Samuel C. Alexander, of Williston, Vt., born at Essex, Vt., April 11, 1817; married Samuel C. A., May 29, 1835. By him she had three

By a change in the channel of the New Haven river in the town of New Haven during the night between the 26th and 27th of July, 1830, several buildings containing families were isolated and afterward swept away by the waters. Of the twenty-one persons who were thus surprised and washed away, seven only escaped, the remaining fourteen found a watery grave. Mr. Claflin's home was one of those isolated, and threatened with destruction. On finding his dwelling surrounded, he fled with his family to the chambers. Fortunately a large tree stood near the house, whose branches could be reached from the chamber windows. Mr. Claflin passed his family into the branches of this tree, where they passed a night of sleepless terror. Mary was one of these children. Fortunately the main current did not strike the house, or uproot the tree and in the morning they were all rescued from their danger.

Francis Willson was an Assistant Justice of the County Court, (now called County Judge), in 1840-1. He was for two years a member of the State Senate.

He was born at Lancaster, N. H., on the 9th day of October, 1803, and was the son of Francis Willson, a respected physician of that town, and of Temperance Giddings. He died at Hinesburg on the 27th of September, 1864. He was a christian gentleman, and an exemplary and valuable citizen.

John Buckley Perry, was born at Richmond, Berkshire Co., Mass., December 12, 1825. He was the eldest son of Daniel, who was the youngest and eleventh child of the Rev. David Perry, of Richmond, who was the pastor of the Congregational church there for nearly forty years. His mother was Catharine the youngest daughter of Mr. Aylesworth, of Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y. He was the great-grandson of Joshua Perry and Mary Leavenworth, of Stratford (Ripton parish) Connecticut. See No. 13.

At six years of age his father removed to Burlington, Vt., where he fitted for college at the old Burlington Academy. In 1843, he entered the University of Vermont and was graduated there in 1847, and the same year united with the first Congregational church there.

After spending about three years at the south, teaching and for his health, he entered the Theological Seminary at Andover in 1850, and was graduated there in September 1853.

In 1854, he became the stated supply of the Presbyterian church at Sandlake N. Y., remaining there some seven months, declining to become their pastor. He was then the stated supply at Hinesburg for a few months. In 1855, he accepted a call from the Congregational church at Swanton, Vt. and was ordained and installed there December 12, 1855, over which church he remained eleven years. At the close of his pastorate at S. supplied the church at Wilmington, Vt. for one year, but he declined a call there.

During the later part of the great conflict, he spent some time in the army, first as a delegate in the service of the Christian Commission and afterward as a chaplain of the 10th Vermont regiment. He was present at the taking of Petersburg and also at the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox.

In June 1867, having a desire to continue his studies, he went to Boston, occupying different pulpits until the next autumn. Toward the close of that year, he received through Professor Agassiz, an invitation to a position in the museum of comparative zoology at Harvard College, Cambridge, of which he is the director. Having accepted the situation, he took charge under Professor Agassiz of the department of Paleontology.

During the year 1871, he accepted his appointment as Professor of Sciences and Theology in Oberlin College of Ohio, devoting five months to the duties of his Professorship, still holding his position at Cambridge and giving the rest of the year to the duties growing out of his connection with the museum.

Mr. Perry was joined in marriage to Lucretia Leavenworth Willson, only daughter of the Hon. Francis and Mrs. Rachel (Leavenworth) Willson, of Hinesburg, Vt., March 5, 1856. Mrs. P. died March 28, 1858, leaving an infant son, who is yet living—Francis Willson Perry.

He married as his second wife, Mrs. Sophia Harmon Wright, at South Bend, Ind., May 27, 1867. She was the daughter of Dr. Ezekiel and of Sophia Smith Harmon, of Clarkson, N. Y., and survives him.

Two extracts from his diary will, perhaps, give as clear an insight into his character, as anything which could be written. On his 23d birthday he writes thus:—

"If my life is spared, I trust I may some day be able to reconcile the sciences with each other, and especially with religion. I am beginning to look upon that as the great work of my life. It is more than yet has been fairly accomplished, so far as I know, and more than I can hope to do satisfactorily. I would direct all my efforts to the unfolding of my own powers, so as to be able to understand the scriptures, and be able to justify the ways of God to man. I have for a long time felt in this way, and O, that I may have strength to accomplish it, if it will tend at all to the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom."

Towards the close of his diary, he penned the following:—

"The foregoing meagre summary indicates that I have lived a very quiet, uneventful life, as that of a student, be it of Nature or of books, usually is. What I have aimed at has been a simple, faithful discharge of duty, wherever I have happened to be. The little I have done has been in a silent unobtrusive way, and without ostentation. Thus, as I fain would believe, seeds of truth have been sown in many hearts, and gentle influences constantly infused into the lives of those in whose society I have moved, which, as we may well trust, have been silently working as good elements for the elevation of my fellows, and so to the glory of God."

The great work of his life, as indicated in the first of the above extracts, made him a devout student of the word of God, and not only an enthusiastic, but also a devout student of the works of God.

The idea of his youth he carried out. All through his ministry he recreated where he might find the most nature. The first place of his ministry, Swanton, Vt., was washed by the waters of Lake Champlain. Always faithful to his people, he yet found time to explore most fully the geologic formation of the region. His thorough knowledge on this subject made him acquainted in the year 1860, with the celebrated geologist, Prof. Jules Morron, of Zurich, Switzerland, now a resident of Cambridge. And a paper which he read in 1867, before the Boston Society of Natural History, (Prof. Agassiz being present), entitled, Queries on the Red Sandstone of Vermont, led to his immediate acquaintance, at the close of the reading, with that world-renowned naturalist, to an invitation to meet him at the museum on a certain day, and to an offer on that occasion of the place which he occupied till his death.

"The only fault I have ever seen in him," says the great naturalist, "was his propensity to overwork. I sent him South, thinking the excursion would give him recreation, but he worked the more, and when his call came to accept the Professorship at Oberlin, I said, go! it will be a means of rest. But the recreation brought only a large amount of labor. While in the Seminary he devoted much time to the study of languages, and was very conversant with twelve. "I have hardly known which to admire most," says Prof. Agassiz, "his thorough understanding of his profession, or his broad culture. He seemed at home in every department of literature."

"There are four things," writes another, (the Rev. Walter Forsyth, of Englewood, Ill.,) "which impressed me the more, the more I knew him: these were, his sincere goodness, his intellectual ability and culture, his great devotion to the cause of science and religion, and his remarkable modesty."

The above seems a clear analysis of his character.

Various suggestions have been made relative to the preservation of his writings in some permanent form. As one incentive to such a result, Prof. Agassiz has given the following order in which his collected writings should be arranged.

- | | |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| 1. Theological Geology. | 5. Glacial Phenomena. |
| 2. Tertiaries. | 6. Paleozoic Corals. |
| 3. The Lake Champlain Series. | 7. Foliated Rocks. |
| 4. Massachusetts Geology. | 8. Change of Level of Continents. |

He was a faithful minister, he was an honored scientist, but he will always be remembered as an expounder of the relations between the two, an interpreter of the word and works of God.

I have taken the foregoing sketch of Prof. Perry, almost literally from a sketch of him published in the Congregational Quarterly for April 1873. But it embraces but a small part of the sketch. He was a rare scholar, and an accomplished christian gentleman.

THOMAS,⁵ THOMAS.¹

Born September 22, 1790, in Nassau, N. Y.

Married SARAH SEYMOUR, 1814.

He was a carpenter, poor and unthrifty. His family was living in Troy, near the corner of Washington and Fifth streets, First Ward, when, on the evening of January 1, 1837, an avalanche of clay broke from the summit of a hill, Mt. Ida, five hundred feet above, and followed by a torrent of water and sand glided swiftly to the plain below, overwhelming three dwellings and instantly killing three of the children of Isaac Leavenworth. One, Emma, was taken out of the ruins alive, and Mrs. L. was rescued alive, but shockingly bruised and injured. Two of the houses were occupied, one of them by John Grace, who was killed, as was also his wife.

The land-slide also swept away two stables, containing twenty-two horses, of which sixteen were killed, and a burning brick kiln, owned by a Mr. Cone. In the summer previous, a slide had occurred near the same place, doing but little damage at the time. At the scene of the disaster on New Year's evening, the clay covered several acres, and was from ten to forty feet deep.

The following notice of Mrs. Train was sent to her relatives and friends on the occasion of her death:—

IN MEMORY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, on Thursday, April 10, at the ripe age of 76, Mrs. LUCIA LEAVEAWORTH TRAIN, widow of the late Rev. Asa M. Train, for twenty-two years pastor of Plymouth Church in Milford, Connecticut.

The aged pilgrim has found rest at last in the home which knows no change. For many years suffering from those bodily ailments which are incidental to advancing age, and in her last illness enduring intense pain, she was glad "to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." Mrs. Train was a woman of strong character, with a clear intellect, a discriminating judgment, a generous heart, and unselfish devotion to the good of others.

What she was as a true helpmeet of one who, during so long a pastorate, served his generation as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ, how she abounded in good works, and illustrated the beauty of a symmetrical christian character, those who labored with her and enjoyed her companionship, can bear witness.

Being called, in the sad Providence of God, to part with three children, two in early life, and the third in the loveliness of budding womanhood, and finally closing the eyes of her dear husband in death, she has walked these many years past in life's journey almost alone, yet not alone, for Christ has been with her.

Mrs. Train left no dying words for her friends to cherish and enshrine in memory; but she did leave what is better, the legacy of a good name—the record of a life well spent. Having let her light so shine on earth, she has gone to shine among those who have turned many to righteousness, even as the stars forever and ever.

The funeral obsequies were observed at the residence of Dr. Beardsley, Milford, whither the remains were brought from New Haven, the place of our friend's decease. Tender hands bore the body to its burial, in the old family ground, there to lie with the dust of her kindred till the Resurrection.

Admitted to Suffolk Co., (Boston) Bar, March 10, 1848. Afterward spent some months in the office of Hon. Thomas C. Perkins, Hartford, Conn. Opened an office in Waterbury, in the spring of 1849. Represented the town in the State Legislature in 1850, and obtained a charter for a Savings Bank, which he has continued to manage since that time and which probably influenced the future business of his life. In 1853, in connection with the late Abram Ives he established the Citizens' Bank, now the Citizens' National Bank of Waterbury, of which he still holds the presidency and retired from the practice of law. Banking was his principal business until 1868, when he became president of the Scovill Manufacturing Co. and has since devoted a large part of his time to that business. He is also treasurer of the Bronson Library, which has a permanent fund of $200,000 and is director and trustee in various other business, charitable, religious and public corporations.

He was a member of the State Legislature in 1850, 1858, and 1865. Serving the last two years as chairman of the committee on banks; also in 1865, as a member of the committee on the revision of the statutes.

He has been much interested in the prosperity of his native town and taken an active part in the construction of public water works, in organizing and conducting the Bronson Library, in establishing a rural cemetery and in various other public improvements. His name has frequently been mentioned in connection with some of the highest offices in the State, but he has no inclination for political life and seeks relaxation from business in literary occupations and affairs of local public interest.

The following notice of him was prepared by the Hon. Frederick J. Kingsbury, his nephew, to whom, as will be seen, I have in the course of this work been greatly indebted:—

"He began fitting for college at Waterbury, with Rev. Daniel A. Clark, and went with him to Amherst Academy, entered Amherst College and was graduated in the Class of 1825. He was at one time a student in the family of Rev. J. Hallock, of Canton, Conn., but I have not been able to ascertain the date. He was also at one time a student and assistant at the Rensselaer Institute, Troy. After graduating, he was principal, for a year, of an academy at Boxford, Mass., and completed his theological studies at Andover Seminary in 1827. He had intended to enter the Turkish missionary field with Dwight and Schauffler, but his plans were changed by the death of the lady whom he was to marry.

He supplied the Congregational church at Orange, Conn., one year, and was ordained pastor at Bristol, Conn., December 16, 1829. In June, 1831, he married Miss Elizabeth Manning Peabody, of Salem, Mass., a lady of great loveliness of character and highly accomplished. During her life she assisted him in his school enterprises, into which she entered with great zeal, and for which she evinced peculiar aptness. He was dismissed from Bristol in September, 1831, and removed to Charlotte, N. Carolina, where he became pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Principal of a Young Ladies' School. He also took a very active interest in the general educational affairs of the State. He delivered lectures, wrote articles for the papers, published pamphlets, and edited almanacs, endeavoring in every way to wake up the people to the importance of public education. In the Summers he traveled among the mountains, hunting with the pioneers, talking with influential men on his favorite topic, and preaching to such scattered people as he could bring together on Sundays. In 1838, on account of the health of his family, he removed to Warrenton, Virginia, where he established a school.

In 1839 having been called to the new High St. church in Petersburg, he left his school temporarily in charge of his wife and went at once to Petersburg. At this time the trouble in the Presbyterian church was at its height, and he took an active part in the controversy. The church to which he was called, grew out of this difficulty, and was a new organization and without a building. Under his energetic management they soon had a handsome church provided with organ and bell. After the quarrel was adjusted, or had lost its force, the new church was absorbed again in the old one. After this, though he continued to preach frequently to destitute churches in various parts of the State, he assumed no regular charge, but devoted his energies chiefly to his school, which he had, in the meantime, re-established at Petersburg. He was pastor of the High St. church about four years. His school soon rose to great importance, and drew scholars from a long distance. He continued it with success until the breaking out of the war. He sympathized with the South in this unfortunate struggle, and entered into the contest with the same energy that marked all his undertakings. When the war was over he again turned his attention to educational matters, and at the time of his death was Corresponding Secretary of the Virginia Educational Association, an organization which owed its existence largely to his efforts, and through which he hoped to develop some broad plans in educational interests.

Mr. L. was a man of medium height, rather slender, having thin, light hair, and bright blue eyes. He was very erect and dignified in his carriage, having great energy, physical activity and personal courage. He was a bold and vigorous writer, a ready and eloquent speaker, and accomplished scholar, both in literature and the sciences. He possessed rare administrative capacity and business talent. Whatever he put his hand to was very apt to prosper. As a teacher his talent amounted to genius. He combined a remarkable power of exciting enthusiasm in the minds of his pupils, with great facility for communicating knowledge, and a dignity of manner which enabled him to maintain discipline with little apparent effort. The resolutions passed at the time of his death, by the various bodies to which he belonged, speak in the highest terms of his ability and usefulness.

327. CATHARINE LEAVENWORTH⁴ — JESSE,⁵ JESSE,⁴ MARK,³ THOMAS,² THOMAS.¹

Born May 1, 1792, at Danville, Vt.

Married, November 3, 1812, Enoch Hazeltine, cabinet maker then of Danville Vt. He subsequently removed to Littleton, N. H., then with his son Charles, to New Bedford, Mass., where he now resides (August 1870). He was born January 29, 1788 and died at New Bedford, February 1, 1873.

The following letters from Wm. Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips illustrate the character of Enoch Hazeltine.

Boston, Feb. 9, 1873.

DEAR MR. HAZELTINE.—I see that your venerable father has at last succumbed to that law of mortality which, sooner or later, reduces the whole human race to dust, so far as these "fleshy tabernacles" are concerned; for over the spirit it has no power, except to change its sphere of activity and remove what would otherwise prove an insurmountable obstacle to development and progress. The translation must have been to him a joyous one, not only in the deliverance thereby secured from all bodily suffering, but in the advantages derived from being "clothed upon" for a higher state of existence. His was no untimely exit. The term of his earthly sojourn extended to that of two generations, and his birth was coeval with the constitutional organization of our republic. There has been no President of the United States, from Washington to Grant, no changes of the administration, no rise and fall of parties, outside of his personal knowledge. Though at no time conspicuous to the public eye, he was no ordinary man, acting well his part in all the relations of life. Eminently disposed to "prove all things," and equally inclined to "hold fast that which is good," he kept step with the foremost in the march of reform, eschewing all considerations of worldly expediency in a tenacious adherence to immutable principle, fearing no obloquy or persecution, and ever seeking to leave the world better than he found it. Hence his prompt and zealous espousal of all the marked reformatory movements of the present century—not at the eleventh hour, but among the earliest in the field; never waiting for reinforcements, or for that partial success which seems to be prophetic of ultimate triumph, but standing alone if need be, never doubting how the conflict would end. Such qualities of head and heart are too rarely found; for there are few independent seekers after truth and duty, the great mass of society being controlled by tradition and custom, ever raising the old inquiry, "Have any of the rulers believed on him?"

To the present generation—especially the younger portion—it may now seem a small matter, requiring no moral courage or self denial, to have signed the total abstinence pledge and given an uncompromising support to the temperance cause more than forty years ago; for that cause has attained the highest respectability, and gathered to itself the strongest moral forces in the land, enacting laws and shaping legislation for the furtherance of its beneficent object. So far as relates to this part of the country, the "offence of the cross" has long since ceased in regard to the temperance question. But in its early stage, and for a considerable period, it had to encounter popular ridicule, censure, opprobrium, hostility, to an extreme degree. It was, therefore, a time that demanded exceptional conscientiousness, firmness, persistency, courage and fidelity:

"Possessions vanish, and opinions change,
And passions hold a fluctuating seat;
But, by the storms of circumstance unshaken,
And subject neither to eclipse nor wane,
Duty exists—immutably survives!

So reasoned and so acted your stalwart sire. Hence, no sooner was the anti-slavery flag unfurled than he enlisted for the war, and never laid down his weapons until victory was achieved, and every bondman set free.

An octogenarian, he was wholly exempt from the conservatism of old age. With deep conviction he united a teachable spirit, conforming his views to the light vouchsafed to him, and aiming always to be right. Blessed be his memory.

Very truly yours,

WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

Charles Hazeltine.

9th February, 1873.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter I opened on my return from a lecture tour—too late to be of any service in the respects you were to pay to your father's memory. I regret this, for my heart warms at every recollection of the hardy few who bore the brunt and trial of that day of trial. I remember your father's name as often on the lips of those early laborers, though I seldom, if ever, enjoyed his society more than a few minutes at a convention. These are precious memories. He has left you the best of legacies—such a name and such an example. I am with you in earnest sympathy.

Cordially, WENDELL PHILLIPS.

His wife died November 3, 1857, at Springfield, Mass., aged sixty-three, then living with her eldest daughter.

He had a thorough knowledge of his profession, a fine person and prepossessing manner and address, which enabled him at an early day, to command an extensive practice, almost without a rival, in the towns of Wheelock and Sheffield, and extending also into neighboring towns. He finally left Wheelock in consequence of ill health, brought on by his arduous and unceasing labors. Dr. L. was a christian gentleman, proverbial for his kindness and benevolence, answering the calls of the poor, where he expected no return, with the same promptness and fidelity as those of the rich.

Born January 15, 1796, at Waterbury, Conn.

Died unmarried November 20, 1862, at New Orleans. Graduated at the Yale Medical School in 1817. Was Assistant-Surgeon in the U. S. army from 1833 until he resigned September 30, 1840. He never married. At fourteen he was sent to the Cheshire Academy, then under the care of the Rev. Tillotson Bronson, and then to the Ellsworth Academy, under the Rev. Daniel Parker, father of Hon. Amasa J. Parker. Here he remained three years.

At eighteen he began the study of medicine with Dr. Edward Field, of Waterbury; but soon went to study with Dr. Isaac Baldwin, of Great Barrington, Mass. He also studied under Dr. Jonathan Knight, and Dr. Eli Ives, of New Haven; and after attending two courses of lectures, was graduated in 1817, with high honors. He devoted himself largely to botany, and was placed in charge of the Botanical Garden attached to the Medical College at New Haven. He studied French at Augusta, and settled at Cahawba, Alabama; but his health suffering, he removed to Augusta, and became a druggist, and remained four years.

Melvin C. Leavenworth

OF EXCELLENCE
OUR BOMBS ARE THE

FOR NAME AND

He then entered the army as Assistant-Surgeon, and was stationed at Forts King, Jessup, Huron and Leavenworth, Black Creek and Camp Sabine, and finally at Fort Gratiot, Mich.

He served through the Florida war with Gen. Taylor, and remained eleven years in the army, constantly pursuing his favorite study of botany.

His knowledge of botany was very extensive, and his contributions numerous, and often acknowledged by Drs. Young and Gray, and very handsomely, in their large work; in Silliman's Journal, and by others. He made large additions to botanical science.

He resigned in 1842. He was with Gen. Henry Leavenworth at his death near the False Washita, on the 21st day of July, 1834. At the age of twenty he united with the Congregational church at Waterbury, and was ever a consistent member.

The following sketch of him was published in one of the Waterbury papers soon after his death:—

"The deceased was the eldest son of the late Mark Leavenworth, and after receiving an academical education, graduated at the Yale Medical College, about the year 1818, with high honors. Having a passion for the study of Botany, he was selected by the Faculty, with the late Dr. Percival, the poet, to make a tour South to obtain specimens, and develop the rich floral and herbal treasures of that sunny clime. Having discharged his mission, the doctor concluded to remain south, and entered into practice in Alabama, and afterwards, in Ga., but ultimately having a desire to enter the army, he obtained the appointment of Ass't-Surgeon in the U. S service, where he continued for ten years, and was with Gen. Taylor in the Florida war. Desirous of coming north, he at length resigned his appointment, and for the last 25 years has resided in his native place honored, and respected by all who enjoyed his acquaintance. He was one of the best read men in the place—a sort of walking library—never at fault for reference. Had he devoted his whole energies to botanical science, he would have had no superior in that branch. As a practitioner he was respectable and trustworthy, and hundreds of patients will never cease to remember his kindness and care.

The Doctor possessed an evenly balanced mind, the kindly traits predominating. He was free from all affectation, modest, though of an independent spirit counting no man's wealth or honors, and would cut his right hand off before being guilty of a mean action to advance his own reputation or interests. He had suffered from the imprudence of others, but he never repined, and took the world in the spirit of a philosopher and Christian, always looking on the bright side. Generous to a fault, he was more mindful of others than of himself, a trait rare in these degenerate days. His integrity was without a stain, and in all the various walks of life he leaves an enviable record. The writer, who knew him well from childhood, and loved him like a brother, can bear testimony to the uniform excellence of his character and many virtues. As one of our old citizens, his death will strike home to his early associates, few of whom now remain. He was, however, engaged in a noble cause, that stood near to his heart, and having devoted his last days to the service of his country, he leaves behind him an honored memory as a legacy to his many friends.

The remains of the deceased were interred in the Regimental Burying-ground but we trust, at no distant day, will be transferred to the family tomb at Riverside."

The following notice of Mrs. Kendrick is taken from the Waterbury American of May 9, 1870, and was written by E. B. Cooke, Esq., the senior editor, who had been a neighbor and friend throughout the greater portion of a long life:—

"Mrs. Kendrick was the daughter of the late Mark Leavenworth, a prominent man in his day, who favored her with an education superior to that of most young ladies of the time. With a superior mind, sound practical sense, quiet and unassuming manners, her genial influence was perceptible in all things relating to the family or society. Amiable in disposition, with the kindest of hearts, her friendships were sincere and lasting. She was beloved and honored by all who knew her. An invalid for many years, she, so far as health permitted, shared in the various duties of society, an ornament to the circle in which she moved. Notwithstanding these manifold demands upon her time, it was at her home, and at the fireside in the bosom of her family, that her influence was pre-eminent. She was the center of a charming circle, which is now broken by the relentless hand of the king of terrors. She was fully resigned and prepared to meet the inevitable destiny. The deceased early embraced the religion of the Savior, and was a bright and shining example of christian character. She was a communicant for fifty years in the First Congregational church in this city. Few women have been more faithful and more beloved. Few have exerted a better and purer influence. She leaves one of the most fragrant of memories. She will long be missed by her friends, and by the community.

Thus another name is stricken from the roll of our older townfolk, who are fast disappearing from the stage of life. The surviving relatives of the lamented dead can obtain comfort alone from above. God doeth all things well, though it may be hard to bear so sad a dispensation."

The following sketch of Governor Kendrick is taken from Bronson's History of Waterbury:—

"John, the grandfather of Green Kendrick, was a Virginian, supposed to be the second or third generation, from the original ancestor from Massachusetts. He was a tobacco planter, and had four sons, John, William, James and Benjamin, and four or five daughters. He was born about the year 1735, and died 1810. John, his eldest son, father of Green, removed to North Carolina about the year 1786, and was a tobacco planter, until the invention of the cotton gin by Whitney, when he became a cotton planter. He was a man of ability, integrity, and eminent usefulness in all matters pertaining to the church, the State, and society. He was a deacon of the Baptist church, was born in 1764, and died in 1823. The wife of the above John Kendrick was Martha Dinkins, daughter of John Dinkins, a wealthy planter, believed to have been of Welch descent. She was born in 1765, and died in 1825. Was a woman of many virtues, fulfilling the duties of life with a scrupulous regard to the precepts of the bible. She was the mother of eleven children, nine of whom became heads of families. There were eight sons and three daughters. Green was the seventh child, and is the only survivor.

Green Kendrick was born in Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, April 1, 1798, from seven to ten years of age, attended a common country school, to and from which he walked more than three miles night and morning. From ten to nineteen, he labored on the plantation, attending school at such brief intervals as his duties would allow. For two years during the latter part of the time he enjoyed somewhat better educational advantages than was common for the sons of planters at that time. He was very ambitious, both in his labors in the field and in his studies, and thus accomplished more than most others with whom he was associated. His father taught him industry and necessity made him frugal. At the age of nineteen after teaching a common school nine months he obtained a place in a country store where he remained about a year, when he procured a more desirable position as salesman in a store in Charlotte, the county town. In a little more than a year he purchased the stock of his employer on credit and commenced business on his own account. In 1823, he married Anna Maria, daughter of Mark Leavenworth, of Waterbury. The death of his father which occurred about this time, put him in possession of additional means. He continued the mercantile business at Charlotte, until the spring of 1829, when he closed it and removed to Waterbury where he engaged in the manufacture of clocks under the name of Mark Leavenworth & Co., and in that of gilt buttons, under the name of Leavenworth and Kendrick; since then he has continued to be interested to some extent in the manufacture of the various articles for which Waterbury is somewhat distinguished. In 1845, 1847, and 1858, Mr. Kendrick was a member of the House of Representatives, of Connecticut. In 1846, he was elected to the Senate and was chosen Lieut. Governor in 1851. In 1854, he was again a member of the house and Speaker, after the resignation of L. F. S. Foster, who was elected to the United States Senate and throughout the session of 1856, he was the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

In addition to the foregoing account of Governor Kendrick, it should be stated that since the publication of Dr. Bronson's History, he has been often in the upper or lower house of the Legislature of Connecticut, and in all three years in the Senate, and in all, eight in the Houses.

He has at different times presided over three of the manufacturing corporations of the city of Waterbury and has been for many years, and is now (1873) Chairman of the Board of Education. He was elected President of the Bronson Library (a splendid institution, with a capital of $200,000) for ten years from the fourth day of July 1868, and still holds that position.

For two years, he was County Commissioner. From his first residence at Waterbury, he has been one of the most liberal and active members of the first Congregational society. He was Chairman of the Building Committee, which erected the present church in 1840, and is now Chairman of another Building Committee elected to erect another church upon the same ground, and has subscribed ten thousand dollars towards the fund for its erection.

The city of Waterbury is mainly indebted to him and two other gentlemen, now deceased, for the beautiful park which so elegantly adorns its center. Indeed, for forty years past he has taken a very active and conspicuous part in all matters pertaining to the interests and prosperity of the city, county and State of his adoption. His enterprise and public spirit have contributed greatly to the beauty and growth of the city of Waterbury, and advancing years have not dampened his ardor or his anxiety still to be useful.

It must be to him a source of great satisfaction, that his fellow citizens have fully appreciated the value of his services, and have at all times been ready to make it manifest both by word and deed.

Before handing the above to the printer, I learn from the public papers that Mr. K. died at Waterbury, of paralysis, on the 25th day of August, 1873.

The Waterbury Daily American of the 26th inst. thus announces his death:—

"DEATH OF HON. GREEN KENDRICK.

"We announce to-day, with feelings of deep grief and sadness, the death of the Hon. Green Kendrick, one of the oldest and most esteemed citizens of Waterbury. Mr. Kendrick has been suffering for the past ten days from a severe attack of rheumatism, which confined him to his house and part of the time to his bed. Yesterday afternoon about half past three, he was stricken with paralysis, from which he died at half past ten in the evening, never having shown the least sign of consciousness from the time of the fatal attack until death relieved him from his sufferings, and took from our midst a man honored for his liberality, kindness of heart and sterling integrity. He was a native of Charlotte, N. C., but has resided in Waterbury for over forty years, and was one of those noble pioneers who aided in laying the foundation of the future greatness and prosperity of our city, and as a business man contemporaneous with the Scoville Brothers, J. P. Elton, and Aaron Benedict,—names including Green Kendrick, which Waterbury can not too much honor. Mr Kendrick has repeatedly, and without solicitation on his part, received places of trust at the hands of his fellow-townsmen. We defer a more extended obituary until to-morrow. This sudden and unexpected event has cast a gloom over the whole community."

The same paper of the 28th of August, contains the following editorial notice of Gov. K., omitting some facts in his life, contained above:—

"A PROMINENT CITIZEN GONE.

It is not often that our community is so deeply moved as it was on Wednesday by the news of the death of Hon. Green Kendrick. It was known to a few of his friends that he was confined to his house by illness; but the sudden stroke by which he was cut down could not have been foreseen and when the fact was communicated to the public that he was dead, surprise and sadness were mingled in all hearts. There is scarcely another citizen in Waterbury who has filled so large a space in it for many years past, or who has done so much to develop the resources of the city, to harmonize and elevate its various classes, and thus to secure a lasting place in the remembrance of the people. He had resided in this town forty-four years, and almost from the first, had exerted a marked influence in business, in politics, and in the social life of the community. But his influence was not confined to Waterbury; he was known throughout the State, and in former years had held some of the highest offices in the gift of the people.

Amidst the cares of a busy life Mr. Kendrick found opportunity to interest himself in the great public questions of the times, both within the limits of the town, and in the State at large. He was an active member of the Whig party so long as it remained in existence, and frequently represented his doctrines as well as the general interests of his adopted town, in the State Legislature. He was repeatedly chosen to the House of Representatives, and more than once to the Senate. In 1851 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor of the State, the late Thomas H. Seymour being Governor, and subsequently in an election by the legislature came within one vote of being chosen Governor. In 1854, after the resignation of the Hon. LaFayette S. Foster, he was made Speaker of the House, and was again chosen speaker in 1856. In the breaking up and reconstruction of parties in 1856, he cast in his lot for a time, with the Fillmore men, but ere long, in view of the attitude of the Republican party towards the South and its "institutions," he became a Democrat, and so continued to the end of his life. By nature a broad and kindly man, he largely out-grew in his later years the bondage of party, and exhibited a large liberality and a constant desire for conciliation and the spread of good feeling.

Mr. Kendrick's influence in his own town was very marked, and was always exerted in favor of progress and right. He did much to develop and beautify the city, and to the very last was interested in the various public enterprises of the place, and anxious in regard to its future growth. For many years he was a member of the Board of Education, and at the time of his death was its president. He was also president of the Board of Agents of the Bronson Library, and was deeply interested in the progress of education and good taste among the people. He was an active member of the Congregational Society, and next to the late Aaron Benedict, was the largest contributor to the building fund for the new church now in process of erection. He was chairman of the building committee, and until within two or three days of his death watched the progress of the new edifice with deep interest.

Educated a Baptist, Mr. Kendrick never saw his way clear to uniting with the Congregational church; but his interest in religion was deep and constant and his desire to live a Christian life, frequently found distinct expression in his converse with intimate friends. Amid the sorrows of his later life, he bore himself with Christian resignation and courage. It was only to those who knew him best, that the seriousness of his purpose, the depth and vigor of his thinking, and the kindness of his heart were fully known. He found his chief joy not in his own comfort but in the happiness of others, and died amidst the sympathies and affections of the entire community. When the people of Waterbury assemble on the morrow to follow his remains to their burial, they will mourn a leader and a father,—a citizen who deserves to be honored, a true and noble man whose decease will long be regretted.

Born May 13, 1800, at Waterbury, Conn.

Died July 22, 1825, of fever, at Middletown, Conn., after an illness of ten days, unmarried.

He was the son of Mark, and the great-grandson of Rev. Mark Leavenworth, both of Waterbury, and was born May 13, 1800. His mother was Anna, a daughter of Moses Cook, also of Waterbury, a woman of excellent sense, and greatly esteemed. His earliest education was obtained in the common schools of his native village. Resolved to go to college, he began to fit himself by classical study, but when he was nearly prepared, owing partly to excessive application, his eyes failed and he was obliged reluctantly to change his plans.

In the fall of 1823, he joined the medical class of Yale College, and for one term attended the lectures of Drs. Smith, Ives and Knight. Subsequently, he became the student of Dr. Edward S. Cone, of Middletown, the intimate friend of Drs. Miner and Tully, prosecuting diligently his chosen profession. The last two had just become famous as the authors of a volume containing peculiar views of practice, entitled "Essays on Fevers and other Medical Subjects." Dr. Cone sympathized with these views, while his pupil, naturally enough, became an earnest convert. Dr. Tully had recently been appointed to a chair in the Vermont Academy of Medicine, in Castleton, and there young Leavenworth repaired in the fall of 1824, to hear the great man lecture. He returned an enthusiastic admirer of the Professor and of his teachings.

In the summer of 1825, the spotted fever, or "sinking typhus" had made its appearance in Middletown, and Mr. Leavenworth, (at that time in Waterbury), was sent for by Dr. Cone, to assist them in their business. Though discouraged by his father, he accepted the invitation, unwilling to lose so good an opportunity to test the practice of his instructors, and to gain important knowledge. Worn down with incessant attendance on the sick, and disheartened, probably, by the unyielding character of the disease, he was himself at length attacked, and in spite of the best skill of his physicians, died July 22, 1825, aged twenty-five.

Dr. Miner published in pamphlet form an interesting history of the fever, (which he styled typhus syncopalis), in which he gave a detailed account of the unfortunate case before us.

Thus was cut down when he had nearly completed his professional studies, and when engaged in the discharge of imperious duty, a young man of rare accomplishments and great promise. His death was mourned by a large circle of medical friends, and by the whole community in which he had lived, while his father's susceptible heart was nearly broken by the loss of his favorite son.

Dr. Miner says in regard to him :—

"It is rare that an instance of mortality is attended with a combination of circumstances equally afflicting, and at the same time equally consoling to his sorrowing relatives, friends and acquaintances. The death of such a young man is as much a public as a private loss.

the study of physic and the auxiliary sciences, from his accurate discrimination at the bedside of the sick, he promised fairer to arrive at high eminence and usefulness than most of the candidates of the profession.

"To an uncommonly amiable disposition, was added the all-important qualification of being a man of hopeful piety. He was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, but several years since made a profession of religion, and was a member in full communion, with the First Congregational church in his native town."

He was a young gentleman of remarkably fine personal appearance, of agreeable address, polished manners, unblemished character and high promise. Of all the young men who bore the name fifty years since, no one was more generally beloved and admired, or entered upon the duties of life with brighter promise.

The author made his acquaintance while at Yale in the winter of 1823-4, and became at once one of his warm friends and admirers.

He was very fond of his violin and it was his constant companion not only at college, but till the very close of his life. He was a man of great ingenuity, of fine mechanical genius, a splendid penman, a fine engraver, and, indeed, could do anything requiring ingenuity, mechanical skill or taste. He abounded in enterprise, enthusiasm and genius. He was over sanguine and hopeful, more intent on the object to be accomplished, than on its pecuniary results. He was at different periods of his life engaged extensively in business, and after a life of great activity he died of consumption, leaving his wife still living, and now, 1874, residing at Allentown, N. 354. Elias Warner Leavenworth.⁶—DAVID,⁵ ASA,⁴ THOMAS,³ THOMAS,² THOMAS.¹

Born December 20, 1803, at Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y.

Married MARY ELIZABETH FORMAN, at Syracuse, N. Y., June 21, 1833. She is the third child of Joshua Forman, and Margaret P. Alexander, and was born at Onondaga Hollow, N. Y., May 27, 1807. Resides at Syracuse, N. Y.

My father removed from Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., to Great Barrington, Mass., in the Spring of 1806.

I spent my early life at Great Barrington, among the beautiful hills and valleys of Berkshire. I spent the year 1819, at the Hudson Academy, under the care then of the Rev. Mr. Parker, father of the present Judge Amasa J. Parker, of Albany. I also pursued my preparatory studies in part under Erastus C. Benedict, Esq., at Great Barrington, now, 1873, one of the State Senators from the city of New York, and formerly President of the Board of Education there. I entered Williams College as a Sophomore, in the Fall of 1820, and remained there one year.

My father was persuaded to send me one year to Williams, in consequence of President Moore's going to Amherst, and of the effort made in Berkshire to sustain the College at Williams-town at that very trying period in its history.

I entered Yale as a Sophomore in the Fall of 1821; was elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society in 1823; was graduated in 1824, and took my second degree in 1827. My room-mate the last two years was Willis Hall, Valedictorian of the Class, and late Attorney-General of the State of New York. When I entered Williams as a Sophomore, I was prepared to enter Yale as a Freshman, and had intended to do so.

On the 20th day of December, 1824, I began the study of law with Wm. Cullen Bryant, then practicing at Great Barrington, and on the 16th day of May, 1825, entered the Law School at Litchfield, Conn., then under the care of the Hon. James Gould, assisted sometimes by the Hon. Jabez Huntington. I remained there till January, 1827, living in the family of Judge Gould, and rooming with his son James, my classmate in college at Yale. In January, 1827, I was admitted to practice in all the Courts of Connecticut. The Spring, Summer and most of the Fall of that year was spent at Great Barrington, on account of the weakness of my eyes, but in the law office of the late Increase Sumner. On Monday, the 12th day of November, 1827, I left Great Barrington for Syracuse, reaching there, by great diligence, at sunset on the following Saturday. I selected Syracuse under the advice of the Hon. Joshua A. Spencer, late of Utica, who, in the Fall or Summer of 1827, was on a visit at my father's, in Great Barrington, which was the residence of himself and his father's family in his early life.

I was admitted in the Common Pleas as an attorney and counselor, at the February Term, 1828, on the motion of Gen. James R. Lawrence, and in the Supreme Court nearly two years later, at Albany at the October Term, 1829, as an attorney, and as counselor in 1833.

On reaching Syracuse, I studied and practiced with Alfred Northram, Esq., until February, 1829, when the late B. Davis Noxon, Esq., removed to Syracuse, in consequence of the removal of the Courts from Onondaga Hill. We at once formed a partnership, which continued with various members of the family until 1850; first under the names of Noxon & Leavenworth; then of Noxons, Leavenworth & Comstock, having taken in George F. Comstock and George W. Noxon; then of Noxon, Leavenworth & Comstock, George Noxon having died, and his father having retired, and James Noxon having come into the firm; and finally of Noxon & Leavenworth again, including James Noxon and myself.

I abandoned my profession in the year 1850, entirely on account of the state of my health. In the great campaign of 1840, I contracted the bronchitis by constant public speaking to large audiences, often for hours at a time, and continued for weeks.

It grew more severe from year to year, and was greatly aggravated by public speaking at Court. In 1850 my condition became somewhat critical, and though enjoying probably the largest and most lucrative practice in the center of the State, I felt constrained to retire from the profession and turn my attention to other pursuits.

While engaged in the practice of law, I uniformly remained in my office to eleven o'clock at night, and allowed nothing to divert me from my profession. Rest and care for two or three years, and abstaining from public speaking, fully restored my health, and other pursuits having engaged my attention, I never returned to the practice of law.

In January, 1832, I was appointed a Lieutenant of Artillery in the 147th Regiment of Infantry, commission signed by Enos T. Throop, Commander-in-Chief and John L. Dix, Adjutant-General. In 1832, I was appointed a Captain of the Artillery in the 147th Regiment of Infantry, commission signed as above.

In 1834, I was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the 29th Regiment of Artillery, commission signed by Wm. L. Marcy, Commander-in-Chief, and Levi Hubbell, Adjutant-General. In 1835 was appointed Colonel of the same regiment, commission signed as above. In the Fall of this year I was nominated at the Whig County Convention, as one of the four Members of Assembly from Onondaga. But the county was hopelessly Democratic, or I should not have consented to be a candidate.

In 1836 was appointed Brigadier-General of the 7th Brigade of Artillery, commission signed by William L. Marcy, and by Thomas W. Harman as Adjutant-General.

In 1837 was appointed a Trustee of the Village in the room of Elihu L. Phillips, elected Sheriff of the County. In 1838-9 and 1840 was President of the village, going out in the Spring of 1841. In 1839 was elected Supervisor of the old town of Salina, then the largest town in the State, having in it four incorporated villages—Geddes, Liverpool, Salina and Syracuse. It was the first election at which the Democrats had been beaten for twelve or fifteen years at least. Re-elected in 1840.

In 1841 my resignation of the office of Brigadier-General was accepted, Rufus King, Adjutant-General. In 1846 and '47 was again President of the village. While President of the village from 1838 to 1841, the Board opened or extended many of the streets, which are now among the most important in the city. Among them was Warren street, opened from Jefferson south to Salina, and we built in it quite a substantial bridge over the Yellow Brook, at the point where Warren is intersected by Madison street.

During the year 1838, the Syracuse and Utica Railroad Company, applied for leave to locate their depot on Washington street, between Salina and Warren, with a width of forty-nine fect. The Board declined to grant the request, though favorable to it; but we called a public meeting for the action of the citizens to be held at the Syracuse house, on the evening of December 26, 1838, the parlor there being then the largest public room in the city. That evening Major Burnet, Capt. Putnam and myself with our wives, took tea at the residence of the late Volney Cook on Montgomery street. While there I drew up the resolution which was adopted at the meeting and as I was to preside, handed it to Captain Putnam, with a request that he would present it, which he did and it was adopted with but one dissenting voice, that of Dr. Mather Williams.

This resolution gave to the city Vanderbilt Square, the rows of trees which still line each side of the railroad from Beach street to the heart of the city, and the first public sewer which reached the Yellow Brook and the swamp which then lying between the village and the Lodi hills. It compelled the Railroad Company to buy twenty-six feet off from the north end of the block south of the depot, and four feet off from that north of the depot.

Previous to 1839, the Geneva Turnpike ran diagonally from northwest to southeast, through the grounds now constituting Fayette Park. In the winter of 1839, while President of the village, I drew and favored the passage of a bill, (Laws of 1839, chap. 139, p. 115,) to enable the Trustees to make a contract with said company, to discontinue that part of their road, the village providing another. The same year I negotiated the arrangement, drew up the contract, had it approved by the Board and executed by the parties, thus securing the beautiful park which is now the pride of the Seventh Ward, and of the whole city. The contract is on the city files.

In 1846-7 the Board, at my suggestion, took possession of pieces of ground, then unoccupied, now known as Warren and Ashland parks, fenced them in and set out trees about them. The title to the former was then in the late Syracuse Company, and to the latter in the State. The city has ever since kept possession of them, and has since acquired title to Ashland Park from the State, I think.

In the Spring of 1849 I was elected Mayor of the city. The city was then grading and improving the "Mill Pond Tract." Under my direction, the tract was laid out with a park in the center of it, now called Armory Park, covering with the streets about it, more than half of the entire tract owned by the State. I took the map to Albany, laid it before the Commission of the Land Office, and was able to get it approved, only conditionally—provided that upon the sale of the lots they should bring $9,000, i. e., $1,000 for the lands, $1,000 for the amount paid by the State towards the improvement, and $1,000 for interest, expenses, etc. The lands were soon after sold at auction, and brought over $16,000, far more than the whole could have been sold for without the park.

In the Fall of the same year I was elected a member of the Legislature, to represent the city district. I was Chairman of the Committee on the manufacture of salt, and a member of the Committee on railroads. I found the members violently prejudiced against Onondaga Salt, though exceedingly ignorant of its merits and disposed to remove the tolls from foreign salt when transported on the canals. This feeling had grown out of a pamphlet written and circulated over the State, by Gen. Wadsworth, of Genesee. So great was the prejudice, that of hundreds of petitions on the subject, asking the removal of the tolls, not half a dozen in all, and not one after the first few days were referred to the committee on salt, but they were sent to the committee on agriculture. But a full and candid discussion of the subject removed every prejudice, the tolls were allowed to remain, and the committee on agriculture made a report on the subject which was entirely satisfactory to me. The Legislature willingly passed just such a bill on the subject of salt as I drew up and offered.—Laws of 1850, chap. 374, p. 794.

The general railroad law of the State, chapter 140 of the laws of 1850, was reported from the committee of which I was a member, and was violently opposed, especially with all the influence Albany could bring to bear upon it. Messrs. Nott and Pruyn, able, astute and influential members, were most ably assisted by a young man just then rising into notice—the Hon. Wm. A. Wheeler, of Franklin—and by several other members. The main support of the bill fell upon me, being the only ready debater on the committee. The Committee of the Whole had nine sittings upon the bill. It was most earnestly and ably discussed, and finally carried by a decisive majority. The clause which alarmed Albany was the provision allowing entire freedom in the construction of railroads, which it was thought might be more beneficial to Troy than to Albany.

I also carried through the Committee of the Whole, the bill to improve the navigation of the Seneca river,—chap. 153, laws of 1850—against two very elaborate speeches made by the late Gov. Raymond, the ablest debater in the House, made on two successive days. I received the warmest congratulations of a large number of the members on my triumph, not only over Mr. Raymond, but over the Canal Board also, who strongly opposed the bill, and furnished Mr. R. with the facts on which his second speech was founded. When Mr. R. closed his first speech he did not intend further to debate the question. But in the evening following, Charles Cook, Canal Commissioner, furnished him with new facts, from which he made a second and very vulnerable speech, which I attacked very successfully. After the vote was taken I walked up to Mr. R., when he, highly excited, remarked, that "he never before had made such a d——d fool of himself as that day, in undertaking to make another man's speech."

The original Select Committee appointed for that purpose, having failed to carry their bill for the preservation of Washington's Headquarters at Newburg, at the solicitation of a delegation of gentlemen from that beautiful town, I undertook to secure the object desired. On the first day of April, late in the session, I moved the reference of the bill, which was still in existence, to a new Select Committee. The resolution was adopted and a committee of my selection was appointed by the Speaker. Among the number were General Burroughs, of Medina, and Joseph B. Varnum, of New York. We remodeled the bill, striking out the objectionable part, making some slight amendments, and I, as Chairman, reported it to the House, and it was passed without difficulty. Thus was saved for future generations one, certainly, of the most interesting relicts of our Revolutionary struggle, and it has already grown into a place of great interest and resort.

There was another bill in the House that year, which excited a very deep interest. It was called the "Mason Will Case," and grew out of a long, protracted litigation to set aside the will. The will had been sustained by the Supreme Court, and their decision was affirmed in the Court of Appeals, by a tie vote.†

The bill on its face provided that the Court of Appeals should grant a re-hearing in all cases of judgments of affirmance by a tie vote, between two certain dates. But on examination it appeared there was no such case between the dates named, except the one in question. It was, therefore, a bill by which the Legislature was to grant a re-hearing in a case finally decided by the Court of Appeals.

The friends of the bill had lobbied it most thoroughly. It had passed the House without any notice, or any question being raised, and the Gov. (Fish), had sent down his veto. I had been urgently requested on both sides to take part on the veto, and declined. Daniel Lord was counsel to sustain the will. But, to my utter astonishment, when the question came before the House the veto had a very feeble support, and many of the best men and even the best lawyers in the House—one who afterwards became a Judge of the Supreme Court—attacked it. I sat quietly in my seat as long as it was possible. But the bill seemed to me such an outrage, such an usurpation of the province of the Court, that I could not remain silent. I entered into the debate with all the zeal of my nature, and all the powers I could command, and made speech after speech. A large audience listened to the debate; the Judges of the Court of Appeals, then in session, and every one about the Capitol came in. After a long and highly exciting debate, the friends of the bill failed to over-ride the veto by only a single vote.

Several local bills also received my attention. But whatever of reputation I obtained during the winter was received mainly from my two days' pitched battle with Gov. Raymond, from the Mason will case, and from the protracted discussion on the general railroad act, in which I stood almost alone in support of the bill, and its opponents embraced several of the ablest men and best debaters in the House. No bill that winter excited a more general interest, and few that have ever been passed have been more important in their results.

The first Presbyterian church was built in the years 1849-50. The building Committee were Moses D. Burnet, Henry Gifford Albert A. Hudson, Thomas B. Fitch and myself. The first three were in favor of a brick church in some of the Grecian styles of architecture. I took decided ground in favor of a stone church in Gothic style, and refused to serve if they built any other. Mr. Fitch was also in favor of the stone church and Gothic architecture. We prevailed, and hence our beautiful brown stone Gothic church, one of the most conspicuous ornaments of the city of Syracuse.

In the fall of 1850, Washington Hunt was nominated as a candidate for the office of Governor by the Whig State Convention and thereupon resigned the office of Comptroller. Without any solicitation on my part, Gov. Fish had selected me to fill the vacancy, when he was reminded that I was still a member of the Legislature and therefore ineligible under the seventh section of the third article of the Constitution. Gen. Amos P. Granger, late Member of Congress from this District and other friends here had, without my knowledge, seen Gov. F. on the subject as I was afterwards informed.

In the Fall of 1851 my friends ran me at the State Convention for the nomination to the office of Secretary of State. Though not "on the slate" made at Albany by Mr. Weed and his friends, I wanted but six or eight votes, as I recollect, of a nomination. Hon. Russell Sage, and the Hon. Wm. A. Sackett were very active in my behalf, not being satisfied with my opponent, who soon after left the country under a cloud. While the canvass was pending, Mr. Weed offered me the nomination for Attorney General, or Judge of the Court of Appeals. But, had I desired either of those offices, which I did not (having retired from the profession in 1850, on account of chronic bronchitis), I could not have accepted of Mr. Weed's most kind and flattering offer, in justice to the many warm personal friends who were supporting me.

In the Fall of 1853, I was nominated for the office of Secretary of State almost without opposition, and with the full concurrence and, I think, at the suggestion of Mr. Weed, who has always been one of my best and most valued friends: in some degree, perhaps, on account of his great admiration of, and friendship for, Mrs. Leavenworth's father, the late Judge Forman, in whose family he lived for some time when a boy, at Onondaga Hollow.

During my term as Secretary of State, Gen. James M. Cook and myself, as a Building Committee appointed by the Commissioners of the Land Office, took down the old State Hall, corner of State and Lodge streets, and erected the Building known as the State Agricultural Rooms and the Cabinet of Natural History. John T. Clark, the State Engineer, was a member of the committee, but, on account of other duties, gave no attention to the erection of the building. Gen. Cook and myself were also the Building Committee for the extension of the Capitol, which was carried back eighteen feet, putting up the corridor to connect it with the State Library, and refinish and refurnish the Assembly Chamber.

With the aid of Franklin B. Hough, my chief clerk in the census department, I took the census of 1855; appointing all the marshals, some 2000, drawing up the interrogatories and instructions, and all the necessary blanks, superintending their printing and distribution into every corner of the State, and giving the necessary explanations and instructions to the marshals from day to day, often replying, for weeks together, to from 150 to 200 letters daily. Dr. Hough here brought into exercise and notice that patience, and industry, and accuracy, that extensive knowledge and capacity, which have since given him a national reputation, and placed him in the first rank of the statisticians of the country. Whatever of merit there is in the census of 1855, belongs in much the largest proportion, to the untiring industry of Dr. H., and to his remarkable qualifications for the task.

The State in 1854, owned that part of the city of Syracuse lying west of Plum street, north of the Erie canal, east of Van-Rensselaer street, and south of the salt water reservoir, and a portion of the Onondaga Creek. These lands were then used for the manufacture of solar salt. The removal of the coarse salt works having been ordered by the Commissioners of the Land Office, from those portions of said tract lying on each side of West Genesee street, sixteen rods in depth, the Commissioners, at my suggestion and solicitation, resolved to survey out and map the whole tract, and appointed me to supervise and direct in regard to it. This was done under and by virtue of chap. 391 of the laws of 1854, p. 986. I caused it to be laid out substantially as it now appears on the maps, straightening West Genesee street, laying out the lots on each side, 100 feet front and 16 rods deep, making the second class streets eighty feet in width, instead of sixty-six, as they are in other parts of the city; laying out a park near the center of the tract, just as large as the Commissioners would sanction, surrounded by ample lots, and with a broad avenue 120 feet wide, leading from this park to the vacant

State lands near the Pump House. When the map of the tract was sanctioned by the Commissioners and laid before the Common Council of the city, they did me the honor to give my name both to the park and to the avenue.

When I entered upon the duties of my office on the 1st of January, 1854, the Natural History of the State was completed, except the Paleontology, and this had been put into the hands and under the care of the Secretary of the Board of Regents, Dr. T. Romeyn Beck, and of the Secretary of State. On looking into the state and condition of the work, I found that it had been settled that the Natural History of the State was never to be completed, but was to terminate abruptly with the second volume of the Paleontology. This was to me most surprising. Professor James Hall had devoted nearly twenty years to the mineralogy, geology and paleontology of the State. He had made far the largest, the most perfect, and the most valuable collection of fossils of this State, and many from beyond it, ever made in the State, or likely to be soon. He had devoted a very large portion of the best part of his life to this study, and it seemed to be but a simple act of justice to him, to his own fame, that he should be permitted to complete the great work which he had commenced, and which was so far advanced. It seemed to me that the State should feel a just pride in the fame of one of its most eminent sons, who was doing much to make it honorably known to the Scientific men and learned societies of Europe as well as of America. It seemed to be due to the cause of Science, a simple debt which the State owed, that with such a collection of fossils, and with a citizen of our own State so pre-eminently qualified to classify, arrange, name and describe them, the great opportunity should not be thrown away. And if anything more were wanting, I was deeply impressed with the conviction that the State owed it to its own good character, and to its highest honor, after having already spent $600,000 on its Natural History, to go on and complete the noble work in which Prof. Hall was engaged, and which he alone could properly perform, and which would be the final completion of the original design.

Deeply impressed with these views, in the winter of 1854-5, I conferred with the Hon. Samuel Blatchford, of New York, then Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means in the House, and with the Hon. Henry Raymond, then Lieut.-Governor, who entered into my views, and we resolved that the work should go on to a final completion, and they promised me their assistance.

The Natural History had already cost over $600,000, and was not popular with the Legislature. The Paleontology was still less so, few appreciating its scientific value. We did not dare to trust to an independent bill, which could not have been carried. Money was not then needed for the work, as several thousand dollars were still in the treasury, of a former appropriation. But the appropriation bill seemed the only mode of proceeding which promised success. A section was therefore prepared. Mr. Blatchford inserted it in the bill, "appropriating $5000 for "the payment of any expenses growing out of the Natural History of the State, to be applied only on the certificate of the "Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Board of Regents, "who are hereby authorized and directed to take charge of all "the matters appertaining to the compilation and completion of "such Natural History, with power to make such contracts, limiting the number of volumes, and fixing the compensation, and "otherwise as they may think proper."—Chap. 539 of the laws of 1855, p. 1015.

Besides Messrs. Raymond and Blatchford, there was probably not a member in either House who knew the provisions of the law as it then stood in regard to the Natural History. The words "completion," and "limiting the number of volumes," sounded very pleasantly, and the clause was passed without objection.

Various questions then arose in my mind in regard to the salary of Prof. Hall, the number of volumes, the number of years for each volume, etc., etc., and not feeling fully advised on these points, I invited the late Prof. Agassiz, Messrs. Gould and Dana, and Dr. Dewey, then of Rochester, one of the Professors when I was at Williams College, to meet me at Albany and confer upon the subject. They came, the conference was held, they gave me their views, and I drew up the contract. I allowed Prof. H. $ yearly for his salary, and $1000 yearly to be spent in fossils, and six weeks vacation each year, and settled the rights of the Professor and of the State in the fossils when the work was completed. Dr. Beck, (Theodore Romeyn) then Secretary of the Regents, was then confined to his room and mostly to his bed, with his last sickness. After the contract was drawn and signed by Hall and myself, I took it to the Dr. for his signature. He greatly disliked Prof. H., and long refused to sign it, making many objections. But a final and strong appeal to his pride in the Natural History, in the early inception of which he took a very active part, finally won his consent and his signature, and insured the completion of the great work of Professor Hall, which forever places him in the first rank of the Paleontologists of the world.

The Professor has done ample justice to my humble efforts in the matter, on the 10th and 11th pages of the preface to the 3d volume of the work.—See upon this subject a letter from Prof. Hall, Appendix, letter II.

As Secretary of State I was also ex officio visitor of the charitable institutions of the State; and in the course of my investigations, saw the great want of some superior investigating and supervising power, which would visit them annually, look into the manner in which they were conducted, and the appropriations expended, and report each year fully to the Legislature, both in regard to their management and their wants.

With this view, I drew up a bill which was introduced into the Senate by the Hon. Mark Spencer on the 31st day of January, 1855, entitled, "An Act in relation to Charitable Institutions supported or assisted by the State, and to City and County Poor Houses, and to create a Board of Visitors for the same,"—See Journal of 1855, p. 174. On the 2d of February the Committee reported favorably, and it was committed to the Committee of the Whole—p. 185. The bill was not disposed of in 1855, and on coming up in Committee of the Whole on the 7th of February, 1856, (p. 165 of Journal 1856,) it was disposed of by a resolution that the President of the Senate should appoint a committee of three who should examine into the affairs of all such institutions, obtain full information, etc.

In the Legislature of 1867 this subject was again agitated, and the Hon. Chas. S. Hoyt, Chairman of the Committee on Charitable Institutions, applied to me by letter for a copy of my bill of 1855. Having retained the original, I sent him a copy, perhaps slightly amended. This is, in substance the bill passed by the Legislature of that year, and much, if not most, of it literally the same.—Laws of 1867, chap. 951. p. 2376, "An Act to provide for the appointment of a Board of Commissioners of Public Charities, and defining their duties and powers."

In the year 1853, the Trustees of the State Asylum for Idiots had purchased five acres of land on the Troy road, near the Patroon's Mansion, at Albany, as a site for the institution. The site was very undesirable, and the Hon. Clarkson S. Crosby, then Senator from Albany, was so much dissatisfied, that he caused a provision to be inserted in the Appropriation bill of 1854, p. 621, authorizing the said Trustees to sell or exchange the site purchased. Under this provision the Trustees appointed a Committee, consisting of Rev. Dr. Pohlman, Gen. Franklin Townsend and myself, then an ex officio member of the Board, to examine the vicinity of Albany, find a more desirable site, if possible, and report. We made the examination and reported that no better site could be found. I submitted, also, in my own behalf, a long and somewhat elaborate report against any location at Albany, and accompanied it by an offer signed by some twenty gentlemen, at Syracuse, proposing to furnish without charge, any ten acres of ground about the city, or pay the trustees seven thousand five hundred dollars in cash, provided the institution was located at Syracuse. When at home a few days previous, I had invited some twenty leading citizens to meet me at my office, unfolded to them my hopes, plans and intentions in regard to the removal of the asylum, and procured their signatures to the offer of land or money, etc. This report and offer led to a very animated discussion, in which every member, I think, expressed his views. Gov. Seymour favored the removal to Syracuse, and the Hon. John C. Spencer, President of the Board, closed the discussion with a very earnest and able argument in favor of the removal, and it was carried by the votes of every member, except Messrs. Townsend and Pohlman of Albany. Mr. Weed kindly lent me the benefit of his influence to procure the removal, and Dr. Wilbur, Superintendent of the Asylum, was well known to favor it. John C. Spencer and myself were the Building Committee to superintend the erection of the buildings, but owing to his ill health he never visited Syracuse, and died before it was completed. But his place was ably filled by Dr. Wilbur, who devoted his time and thoughts largely to the work.

On the 4th day of January 1855, I was elected a Corresponding Member of the American Historical and Geographical Society, of the city of New York, and also, the same year, of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, Boston.

In the fall of 1856 I was again elected to the Legislature, to represent the city district. I was Chairman of the Committee on Canals, and a member of the Committee on Banks; also Chairman of the Select Committee of one from each Judicial District, on the equalization of the State Tax. This committee was appointed on my motion. Early in the session, on the 17th of January, I moved the reference of the papers on file in relation to the equalization of the State Tax to above Committee. The Committee was appointed on the 27th of January. As Chairman of that Committee I afterwards drew up and on the 31st of January reported a bill providing for the appointment of a Board of three State Assessors, to equalize the State tax. This bill was discussed four several days in Committee of the Whole, was violently opposed by the members from the counties aimed at by the bill, but was sustained by a decisive majority, and on the 3d of April, as Chairman of a Select Committee to report important bills to have preference and be acted on before the final adjournment, I reported the above bill among others, and the report was agreed to. But owing to my delicate health, impaired by excessive labor, and my consequent absence for a few days, the bill, which was in my care, was not again called up at that session. But it was again introduced the next year but one, and passed, and has been, and is now, of immense benefit to the State. It is entitled, "An Act to Equalize the State Tax among the several counties in this State."—Assembly journal of 1857, p. 120, 137, 168, 216, 313, 330, 431, 537, 1081; also Laws of 1859, chap. 312, p. 702, etc.

I also drew up and introduced the bill, (chap. 504, p. 47,) entitled, "An Act to provide for an investigation into the origin of "fires in certain cases,"—a most beneficial bill, but the public have never availed themselves of its provisions as much as they should. Also the bill, chap. 804, p. 774, to remove an evil from which some of the country banks were then grievously suffering.

Also a large number of bills in the ordinary course of legislation, relating to the canals and banks, besides several local bills for the city.

In the Winter of 1858, Governor John A. King nominated me to the Senate for the office of Auditor of the State. The Democrats and Know-Nothings having a majority, combined, and politely laid over the nomination till the then next 4th of July, when they would not be in session. When Governor Morgan came into office the following January, at my request he withdrew my name, and nominated the late incumbent, the Hon. Nathaniel S. Benton. The Republicans had in the meantime obtained a majority in the Senate, and my nomination would have been confirmed; but I did not desire the office, and originally consented to accept the nomination to oblige the Governor and some friends, he being embarrassed by the urgent importunity of some candidates he was not willing to nominate.

In 1852 our citizens held various meetings for the purpose of establishing a Rural Cemetery. No grounds were found to compare with the hundred acres which we purchased in 1859. But the effort finally failed, mainly because there was no one who would put himself at the head of the enterprise, and assume the necessary labors and responsibilities. In 1857 meetings were again held in relation to it, but in consequence of the financial troubles of that year, all efforts were again abandoned. In 1858 Hamilton White and myself, having fixed upon a part of our present grounds, consisting of about one hundred acres, as the most desirable lands for a cemetery, began negotiations with Messrs. Charles A. Baker, who owned twenty acres in front and Henry Raynor, who owned seventy-five acres in the rear, for their purchase.

The Syracuse and Jamesville Plank Road ran through them, and we also negotiated with the directors and stockholders of said road, and the Commissioners of Highways of the town of Onondaga, for its removal, and with the late Dr. David S. Colvin for a new route through his land for the plank road. At the end of a year, after many annoyances, and the expenditure of much time, patience and labor, the preliminaries were all finally settled, and terms agreed upon. It was only necessary now to raise $25,000, or something less to accomplish the object. Mr. A. C. Powell now stepped forward to our aid, and was efficient and successful. We soon raised the necessary funds, ($24,500,) and on the 15th of August, 1859, the Association of Oakwood was organized, and Trustees elected, and on the day following the Trustees assembled at my office for the election of officers.

E. W. Leavenworth was elected President. A. C. Powell, Vice President. Hamilton White, Treasurer. Allen Munro, Secretary.

I have been elected President every year since, including the present, 1873, and the Board has left to me nearly the entire management of its affairs. We have spent annually some five or six thousand dollars in improving and keeping up the grounds, besides building a receiving vault at a cost of about $3,500, a house and barn for the Superintendent, fences, etc., and at the annual meeting in 1869 our debt was paid, and we had about $8000 cash in bank. Since then we have bought and paid for more than fifty acres of additional lands, at an expense of more than $20,000, are now out of debt, and have commenced a permanent fund, now amounting to four thousand dollars. We have now a cemetery consisting of about 150 acres, of which about 85 acres are wooded, whose natural beauties and attractions are unsurpassed, and which is kept up in a style to attract universal commendation.

In the Spring of 1859 I was again elected Mayor of the city. During this year I induced the Common Council to order the sale of all that part of Rose Hill cemetery, upon which there had been no burials, being some ten acres. The same was laid out under my direction, except a portion at the intersection of Highland, Douglass and Alvord streets, thus securing another public square, now known as Highland park.

Some ten years after this, and after Messrs. Williams & Scoville had surveyed out the fifty acres of land constituting the Prospect Hill property, and had filed their map of the same, I induced them to change the map of the land on the top of the East Hill, and to lay out there the public square which now beautifies that locality, called McBride Place. This was done at the office of Messrs. Davis & Leach, with the hearty aid of the latter gentleman, and was carried out by the making and filing of a new map of that part of the property.

In the fall of 1859 I was again nominated for the office of Secretary of State, and defeated by 1000 or 1500 majority, in a poll of 600,000 votes by David Floyd Jones, by the combined vote of the Democrats and Know-Nothings. This was brought about mainly by Erastus and James Brooks, of New York, on account of their hostility to Governor Seward, they regarding me as specially his friend. They then controlled the Know-Nothing party.

In the winter of 1860, by an act of the Legislature, I was appointed one of the Board of Quarantine Commissioners, and was, on its organization, chosen its President, and spent most of the following summer in New York and on Staten Island, in the discharge of its duties. Peter B. Sweeney, of New York, now somewhat celebrated, was one of the Board.

In the summer of the same year I was chosen President of the Republican State Convention, assembled at Syracuse to select delegates to the National Convention, then soon to assemble at Chicago. The delegates were all the friends of Governor Seward, and I was then, and before, regarded, and justly, as his warm friend, both personally and politically.

On the 5th of Feb., 1861, I was chosen by the Legislature in joint ballot, one of the Regents of the University. In the month of March in the same year, I was nominated by the President of the United States, and confirmed by the Senate, as the Commissioner on the part of the United States, under the convention with New Grenada, and I acted as such at Washington until the commission expired in 1862. To this commission was referred all claims of American citizens and corporations, from the foundation of the government of New Grenada, down to the time of the treaty, including all damages growing out of the Panama riot, and the confiscation of many vessels—several hundred claims in all, and amounting to many millions of dollars.

In the summer of 1864, I attended the commencement at Yale and was selected to preside at the annual meeting of the Alumni before which the Hon. Samuel B. Ruggles delivered his entertaining and instructive address.

In the spring of 1865 I was the President of a Board of Commissioners, appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, to locate the State Asylum for the blind, under "an act to authorize the establishment of the New York State Institution for the Blind," chap. 587, p. 1176 of the laws of 1865.

A majority of the Board first decided to locate the institution at Buffalo. I moved a reconsideration, and after a full discussion we finally decided by a majority vote, to locate at Batavia. I think the vote was finally made unanimous.

In the fall of the same year I was appointed by the Governor, a Trustee of the State Asylum for Idiots, in the place of Hamilton White, deceased, to fill the vacancy, and in January, 1866, was re-appointed with the concurrence of the Senate.

In the Summer of 1867, I was elected one of the Trustees of Hamilton College, in the place of Gen. James R. Lawrence, who resigned in consequence of age, infirmity, and total blindness; but being one of the Regents of the University, I was ineligible, and was reluctantly compelled to decline.

I was also this year appointed by the Legislature a member of a Board of Commissioners, consisting of the Adjutant General and Inspector General of the State, and myself, for the further improvement and repair of the State Armory at Syracuse. The other Commissioners left to me the performance of the duties, and among other things I constructed the iron fence which now surrounds Jefferson, or Armory, Park.

In May, 1868, I was appointed by the Legislature, a member of a Board of Commissioners, (of which I was the President,) to establish a system of sewerage for the city of Syracuse. The Board was engaged two years in perfecting it, and filed their report with maps, plans, etc., in the city and county clerk's offices May 7th, 1870. The necessity for a system, carefully considered and co-extensive with the city, had become imperative. I suggested and urged it, drew up the bill, procured a large public meeting to be called, and submitted the bill which was unanimously approved, and became the law entitled, "An Act in relation to a system of Sewerage in and for the city of Syracuse." Chap. 780, p. 1747, laws of 1868.

As early as about 1852-3, the "Syracuse Home Association" having been previously incorporated and organized, the late Hamilton White, Thomas B. Fitch and myself raised by subscription from $12,000 to $15,000, as a partial endowment for the same. In 1868, the Board of Counselors had sold their old Home, on East Fayette Street, and Moses D. Burnet, Esq., had most generously offered the Home a most desirable site for a new building, on the corner of Hawley and Townsend streets, on condition that we should raise $25,000 for its construction. Mr. White being dead, Mr. Fitch and myself spent all the time we could spare for several weeks, and raised more than the $25,000 required. Other sums were raised by various other parties, and with the money raised by Mr. Fitch and myself, amounted to more than $32,000. The Building Committee consisted of Messrs. Cornelius T. Longstreet, Dr. Lyman Clary, David French, Thomas B. Fitch and myself, but the principal labor and responsibility fell upon Mr. Fitch and myself. The result is seen in the beautiful structure which now stands upon the ground so opportunely and kindly given to us.

In 1871 I was much occupied in the erection of the expensive Pump Works of the Syracuse City Water Works Co., (of which Co. I am the President), for the supplying the city with water.

At the Annual Commencement of Hamilton College in June, 1872, I most unexpectedly received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

In the month of October 1872, I had the honor of being selected, with Governors Morgan, Patterson, etc., as one of the bearers at the funeral of the Hon. Wm. H. Seward, which took place on Monday, the 14th day of that month. Under all the political changes of forty years, we had been unchanging friends.

On the 22d of November 1872, I was appointed by the Governor and Senate, one of the thirty-two Commissioners (four from each Judicial District) selected to amend the Constitution of the State. My colleagues from the Fifth District were, Hon. Daniel Pratt, late Judge of the Supreme Court and now Attorney General elect; Hon. Francis Kernan, late Democratic candidate for Governor and Hon. Ralph McIntosh, late member from Oneida. We met at Albany, on the 4th day of December 1872, and adjourned March 15th 1873. The result of our labors are embodied in the Constitution, now in process of being submitted to the people of the State for their approval.

There are two amendments adopted by the Board, which were introduced by me and for which I am mainly responsible. One applies to the statute of limitations to all claims against the State. This is the 14th section of the 7th article. The other is embraced in the 10th and 11th sections of the 8th article, which forbid the giving or loaning of the credit or money of the State, or of any city, town, county or village in a variety of cases therein specified. I also took a particular interest in section four, article eight, relating to Savings Banks, having attempted to effect the same object in the Legislature when theretofore a member; also in section nineteen of article 3d, limiting the powers of the Legislature in certain cases, a very important amendment, reported I think by Mr. Erastus Brooks.

Though in delicate health during the entire session, there were few members as regular in their attendance as myself, or who devoted more time to the business of the Commission.

I now, (1873,) hold the following positions:—

President of the Syracuse Savings Bank, having under its care about $2,000,000; was elected in January, 1862.

President of the Syracuse City Water Works Company; elected in May, 1864.

Joshua Forman

1E-6081.

I have been re-elected in each of the organizations above, in which elections are held, from the several times above stated till the present.

The following sketch of Judge Forman is taken from Clark's Onondaga, vol. 2, p. 69 to 83. The notes are by the author:—

To give anything like a perfect biographical notice of this distinguished individual, would require a person more familiar with his public acts, more intimate with occurrences which transpired at the period in which he was most active, and one who knew better the public worth and private excellence of his character than the author. But as he, for a period of more than a quarter of a century, was a leader in the affairs of this county, and became identified with all the majestic projects of State policy, we cannot pass him by without an attempt to do justice to his merits.

Joshua Forman was born at Pleasant Valley, in the county of Dutchess, and State of New York, the 6th of September, 1777. His parents were Joseph and Hannah Forman, who previous to the Revolution, resided in the city of New York. Upon the breaking out of the war and the approach of the British to that city, Mr. Joseph Forman with his family, retired to Pleasant Valley, where the subject of this sketch was born. At an early age he evinced a strong desire for learning, in which he was encouraged by his friends. In the fall of 1793, he entered Union College at Schenectady, and in due time graduated with honor. Directly after his collegiate course was completed, he entered the law office of Peter W. Radcliffe, Esq., of Poughkeepsie; where he remained about two years. He then went to the city of New York and completed his law studies in the office of Samuel Miles Hopkins, Esq. Soon after the close of his professional course, he was married to Miss Margaret Alexander, a daughter of the Hon. Boyd Alexander, M. P. for Glasgow, Scotland. In the spring of 1800, Mr. Forman removed to Onondaga Hollow, and opened a law office on the east side of the creek, where he began early to manifest his public spirit and enterprise. At the time he settled at Onondaga Hollow, the village was mainly situated on the east side of Onondaga Creek, and he being desirous of building up the village, and of extending its boundaries, soon located his father on the north and south road and his brothers John, Samuel and Daniel W., near the west end of the present village, on the east and west road passing through the same, and rapidly built up the western part. This left a space in the middle, comparatively unoccupied. Here Judge Forman soon after erected a large Hotel, and afterwards a fine residence for himself, which was occupied many years after Judge Forman left the Hollow, by his brother-in-law, the late Wm. H. Sabin. He was also mainly instrumental in procuring the location of the academy; church and two or three stores in the same vicinity, before he removed from Onondaga, thereby connecting the whole into one tolerably compact settlement.

By his integrity and straight-forward course in the practice of his profession, he soon became distinguished as a lawyer, and by his talents and gentlemanly deportment became familiarly known throughout the country.

In 1803, William H. Sabin, Esq., joined him as a partner in the practice of law, and for several years they did an extensive business. The subject of the Erie canal became a theme of deep interest to several of the leading men of Onondaga, and to none more so than to Judge Forman. Conversations were held by those who were friends to the project, and measures were early taken to bring the great question before the public. Mr. Forman's talents as a public speaker, and as a man of influence and character, eminently distinguished him to be the individual who should be foremost in moving in the matter. Accordingly in 1807, a union ticket was got up, headed by John McWhorter, Democrat, and Joshua Forman, Federalist. This ticket was carried with trifling opposition. It was headed "Canal Ticket," and as such received the cordial support of a large majority of the electors of Onondaga county.

As was anticipated by the friends of Judge Forman and the great work which he was designated to advocate, he brought forward the ever memorable resolution in the House of Assembly, which alone would render his name immortal, directing a survey to be made "of the most eligible and direct route of a canal, to open communication between the tide waters of the Hudson and Lake Erie.

Mr. Forman had studied the subject of canals as constructed in foreign countries. His mind had been applied intently to their construction, utility and cost, and these labors had been brought to bear and have weight upon the subject now under investigation. He had well considered all the advantages that would accrue to the United States and the State of New York, if this important work should be completed. He had prepared an estimate of the cost of construction, based upon statistics of the Languedoc canal.

While discussing this subject in Albany, during the session, Judge Wright and General McNeill, of Oneida, became converts to the plan, through the instrumentality of Judge Forman, and Judge Wright agreed to second the resolution about to be offered whenever it should be brought up. Judge Forman had no confidence that the general government would assist New York in the construction of a canal, but the resolution framed and offered by him was so worded as to give President Jefferson an opportunity to participate in the measure if he would. Fired with the novelty and importance of this project, and somewhat piqued at the manner of its reception by the members of the House, the advocate took pains to prepare himself thoroughly upon the subject, and when the resolution was called up, he addressed the House in a forcible and eloquent speech in its favor. Fortunately the resolution was adopted, and for this he was for years called a "visionary projector," and was asked a hundred times if he ever expected to live to see his canal completed; to which he uniformly answered, that "as surely as he lived to the ordinary age of man, he did; that it might take ten years to prepare the public mind for the undertaking, and as many more to accomplish it, nevertheless it would be done."

Had not Joshua Forman brought forward the subject as he did, it is not easy to conceive who would have had the moral courage to meet the ridicule of proposing in earnest, what was considered so wild a measure. Had it not been for this timely movement, the subject might have lain idle for years, so far as Legislative action was concerned. But, by it the ice was broken and an impetus given to a direct canal, by the discoveries made under it, and to Joshua Forman must ever be accorded the high consideration, as the first legislative projector of the greatest improvement of the age. During all the times of darkness, discouragement and doubt, he boldly stood forth the unflinching champion of its feasibility, utility and worth, till the day of its completion.

On the occasion of the grand canal celebration, 1st of Nov., 1825, Judge Forman was selected by the citizens of Onondaga county, and as President of the village of Syracuse, to address Gov. Clinton and suite, on their first passage down the canal, accompanied by various county committees along the line. He had but three hours to prepare his address, and it thus appears in the Syracuse Gazette of Nov. 2, 1825:—

"GENTLEMEN—The roar of cannon rolling from Lake Erie to the ocean, and reverberated from the ocean to the lakes, has announced the completion of the Erie canal, and you are this day witnesses, bearing the waters of the lakes on the unbroken bosom of the canal, to be mingled with the ocean, that the splendid hopes of our State are realized. The continued tide which has attended your boats, evinces how dear it was to the hearts of our citizens. It is truly a proud day for the State of New York. No one is present who has the interest of the State at heart, who does not exult at the completion of a work fraught with such important benefits, and no man with an American heart, that does not swell with pride that he is a citizen of the country which has accomplished the greatest work of the age, and which has filled Europe with admiration of the American character. On the 4th of July, 1817, it was begun, and it is now accomplished. Not by the labor of abject slaves and vassals, but by the energies of freemen, and in a period unprecedentedly short, by the voluntary efforts of its freemen governed by the wisdom of its statesmen. This, however, is but one of the many benefits derived from our free institutions, and which marks a new era in the history of man—the example of a nation whose whole physical power and intelligence are employed to advance the improvement, comfort and happiness of the people.

To what extent this course of improvement may be carried, it is impossible for any mere man to conjecture; but no reasonable man can doubt, that it will continue its progress, until our wide and fertile territory shall be filled with a more dense, intelligent and happy people than the sun shines upon in the wide circuit of the globe. It has long been the subject of fearful apprehension, to the patriots of the Atlantic States that the remote interior situation of our western country (for want of proper stimuli to industry and free intercourse, with the rest of the world) would be filled with a semi-barbarous population, uncongenial with their Atlantic neighbors. But the introduction of steamboats on our lakes and running rivers, and canals to connect the waters which nature has disjoined (in both which this State has taken the lead, and its example has now become general,) have broken down the old barriers of nature, and promise the wide spread regions of the west all the blessings of a seaboard district. But while we contemplate the advantages of this work, as a source of revenue to the State, and of wealth and comfort to our citizens, let us never forget the means by which it has been accomplished; and after rendering thanks to the All-Wise Disposer of events, who has by his own means, and for his own purposes brought about this great work, we would render our thanks to all citizens and statesmen, who have in and out of the Legislature, sustained the measure from its first conception to its present final consummation. To the commissioners who superintended the work, the board of native engineers, (a native treasure unknown till called for by the occasion), and especially to his Excellency, the Governor, whose early and decided support of the measure, fearlessly throwing his character and influence into the scale, turned the poising beam and produced the first canal appropriation, and by his talents and exertions kept public opinion steady to the point. Without his efforts in that crisis, the canal project might still have been a splendid vision, gazed upon by the benevolent patriot, but left by cold calumniators to be realized by some future generation. At that time all admitted that there was a high responsibility resting on you, and had it failed you must have largely borne the blame. It has succeeded, and we will not withhold from you your due need of praise.

Gentlemen, in behalf of the citizens of Syracuse, and the county of Onondaga, here assembled, I congratulate you on this occasion. Our village is the offspring of the canal, and with the county must partake largely of its blessings. We were most ungrateful if we did not most cordially join in this great State celebration."

Judge Forman having concluded his address, Governor Clinton replied in a very happy and appropriate manner, in the course of which he adverted to the important views presented in the address, and observed that they were such as he had expected from an individual who had introduced the first legislative measures relative to the canals, and had devoted much thought and reflection to the subject. His Excellency also adverted to the prosperous condition of Syracuse, and of the county, and concluded by expressing his congratulations on the final accomplishment of this great work.

As one of the committee from Syracuse, Judge Forman attended the ceremony of mingling the waters of Lake Erie with those of the ocean off Sandy Hook. He had now passed through all the stages in the progress of the great work, from its first announcement in the Legislature, to its final consummation in uniting the waters of Lake Erie with the Atlantic ocean. His efforts in this great undertaking will ever be an enduring monument of his wisdom, and to future generations will his fame extend.

It is not to be supposed that Judge Forman had employed all his time and talents upon this single object. As a lawyer, he became distinguished; and on account of his integrity and legal acquirements, was appointed First Judge of Onondaga County Common Pleas in 1813. He filled the station with credit and ability for ten years; in fact, he elevated the character of this tribunal to the pitch, which gained for it the high reputation which it has since enjoyed.

He took an early and active interest in the establishment of churches in this county. "The First Onondaga Religious Society," at Onondaga Hill, in 1806, and the "Onondaga Hollow Religious Society," in 1809, owe their early organization mainly to his efforts. The Onondaga Academy, founded in 1814, owes its existence to the interest he manifested in the cause of education, and to his fostering care. He was also one of the most active in promoting the organization of the first Presbyterian society in Syracuse, in 1824, and was one of its first trustees.*

In 1807, he took a lease of the Surveyor General for a term of years, of a part of the reservation lands at Oswego Falls, for the purpose of erecting a grist mill in that wilderness country, at which time not a horse was owned by an inhabitant between Salina and Oswego. This was the first mill erected on the Oswego river in modern times, and it greatly facilitated the settlement of that region.

In 1808 he founded the celebrated Plaster Company of Canillus, for the purpose of more effectually working the extensive beds in that town. In 1813, Judge Forman built the canal and excavated ground for the pond at Onondaga Hollow, where he erected a grist mill, which was then considered one of the best in the county.

In 1817, while there was yet a strong opposition to the Erie canal, and its friends were in the greatest anxiety, and even doubt as to the final result, Judge Forman furnished a series of articles, which were published in the Onondaga Register, signed X, in defense of the work. These papers were written with great ability, and are said by competent judges to be inferior to none that had been written upon that subject.

In 1821, Judge Forman obtained the passage of a law, (drawn by his own hand,) authorizing the lowering of Onondaga Lake, and subsequently the lake was lowered about two feet. The great difficulty had been caused by the high water in the Seneca river, rising to a certain height, which obstructed the channel of the Onondaga outlet; and such was the nature of the obstructions, arising from the narrowness and crookedness of the passage, that when the Seneca

* NOTE.—He drew the subscription paper, obtained the great body of the subscriptions, made the contract for the building, superintended its erection, collected and paid over the money and kept the records for the years 1824-5. He was the founder of the society and at its request a marble tablet was put up in the church by the author, with the following inscription;—

"JOSHUA FORMAN,

Was born in Pleasant Valley, in the county of Dutchess, on the 6th of September, 1777. Locating in Onondaga in the year 1800, he became the founder of this Church, and of the

CITY OF SYRACUSE.

For more than fifty years he spent a life of varied usefulness as a Patriot, Philanthropist, and Christian, his name untarnished, his character revered and honored.

He exchanged the responsibilities of earth for the christian's rest, at the village of Rutlandton, N. C., on the 4th day of August, 1844, leaving to those he loved, the testimony of a good man, whose career had already realized the fulfillment of the promises.

river subsided to its proper limits, the water of Onondaga lake was retained, and in rainy seasons did not fall so as to make dryground around it, till late in summer, which was the cause of much inconvenience to the people living in the vicinity of the lake. To obviate this the lake was lowered, and by it the lands around Salina and Syracuse were improved, leaving bare a beach about the lake, in some places of several rods in width. For the cause of philanthropy and humanity, this was a most important measure. The country around became more healthful, and although previously infested with a fatal miasma in August and September, from that time to this, the country about Syracuse and Salina, has been considered as healthy as any other section in the State.

In 1822, Judge Forman procured the passage of a law authorizing the erection of fixtures for the purpose of manufacturing coarse salt by solar evaporation, with a three cent per bushel bounty on salt so manufactured, for a given number of years. He went to New Bedford, in company with Isaiah Townsend, Esq., to make inquiries relative to solar evaporation of salt water, from persons interested in this mode of manufacturing salt from sea water on Cape Cod. They engaged Mr. Stephen Smith, to come on to Syracuse with them, to manage the salt fields, he having had experience in this mode of manufacture. Mr. Smith was appointed agent of the Onondaga Company, and Judge Forman of the Syracuse Company, and these two proceeded to make the necessary erections for the manufacture of coarse salt.

At this time the Salina Canal terminated at the mill on the southern border of the village of Salina, and there was no water to be had, available for the purposes of carrying machinery in the immediate vicinity of the principal salt spring. With a view of accomplishing this object, Judge Forman accompanied Governor Clinton to Salina, pointed out the ground, and proposed to have the Salina Canal extended so as to communicate with Onondaga Lake. The following year this plan was carried out; the canal was continued to the lake, and arrangements were made for the erection of pump works. This grand improvement in the elevation of brine, was made at the expense of the Syracuse and Onondaga Salt Companies, under the direction of Judge Forman. Afterwards the State bought the fixtures, aqueducts, etc., as they had reserved the right to do. To no individual so much as to Judge Forman, are we indebted for a modification of our salt laws, and for the substitution of water power, for hand labor, in the elevation of brine, for the reservoirs, and all the apparatus connected with those improvements, and for the introduction of the manufacture of coarse salt by solar heat. These were measures in which the public were deeply interested which particularly absorbed his attention, and which have greatly improved and increased the manufacture of salt in the town of Salina.

Judge Forman was emphatically the founder of the city of Syracuse. He came to this place in the year 1819, when there was but a small clearing south of the canal, and lived in a house which stood in the center of Clinton street; since removed. When he came to Syracuse, it was deemed a doubtful and hazardous enterprise. His friends earnestly desired him to withdraw. But at no time did his courage, energy or faith fail him. He foresaw and insisted, that it must eventually become a great and flourishing inland town, and in spite of much determined opposition, and amidst a variety of obstacles and almost every species of embarrassment, he persisted in his efforts, till he had laid broad and deep the foundations of this flourishing city. *

The most prominent obstacles were found in the rival villages in the vicinity, which were likely to be affected by the building up of a larger one in their midst, and in the extensive swamps and marshes which everywhere in this region prevailed, and in the consequent unhealthiness of the locality.

*NOTE.—Forman Wilson & Co., bought the Walton Tract, 250 acres, embracing the central parts of what is now the city, in 1816. Judge Forman caused it to be carefully laid out by his brother, Owen F., assisted by the late John Wilkinson, Esq., in 1818-19, and removed there with his family from Onondaga Hollow in 1819. There were then but two frame private dwelling houses at Syracuse. Thurlow Weed, Esq., says in some of his writings that Judge Forman invented Syracuse.

His work being accomplished, circumstances required his removal from this scene of his usefulness, and the theatre of his labors. In 1826 he removed to New Jersey near New Brunswick, where he superintended the opening and working of a copper mine, which had been wrought to some extent prior to and during the revolution. Soon after his departure from Syracuse, the State of New York became sadly convulsed and deranged in its financial affairs. Our banking system was extremely defective—reform was demanded by an abused and outraged community. All saw and admitted the evil, but no one was prepared with a remedy. At this crisis Judge Forman came forward with a plan for relief, and upon the invitation of Gov. Van Buren, he visited Albany and submitted his plan to a Committee of the Legislature then in session. At the suggestion of the Governor, he drew up the bill which subsequently became a law, and is known as the Safety Fund Act, the great objects of which were on the one hand, to give currency and character to our circulation, and on the other to protect the bill holder. At the special request of Governor Van Buren Judge Forman spent most of the winter in attendance on the Legislature, in perfecting the details of this important act.

This plan operated well for many years, and the Safety Fund Banks of this State sustained themselves under some of the severest and heaviest revulsions which the monied institutions of the country have ever experienced. And it may be safely affirmed that no system in practice on this side the Atlantic, has better stood the test of experience, or secured so extensively the popular confidence as this. The Safety Fund system was exclusively the plan of Judge Forman, and although modifications have since been made, and others projected, in our banking laws, it may be questioned whether the system has been materially improved.

In 1829-30, Judge Forman bought of the government of the State of North Carolina an extensive tract of land, consisting of some three hundred thousand acres, in Ruthfordton County. He took up his residence at the village of Ruthfordton, greatly extended its boundaries, established a newspaper press, and was considered the most enterprising individual in that part of the State; became quite distinguished as a public man, and noted for his exertions to elevate the character, and improve the mental and moral condition of the inhabitants in that region.

In 1831, after an absence of about five years, Judge Forman visited Onondaga. He was every where received with unqualified demonstrations of joy and respect, and every voice cheered him as the founder of the city, and a benefactor of mankind. The citizens of Syracuse, through their committee appointed for that purpose, consisting of Messrs. Stephen Smith, Harvey Baldwin, Amos P. Granger, L. H. Redfield, Henry Newton, John Wilkinson, and Moses D. Burnet, availed themselves of the opportunity to present to him a valuable set of silver plate as a tribute of the high respect and esteem which was entertained for his talents and character and in consideration of his devotedness to their interests, in the early settlement of the village. The plate is in form of a pitcher, * and bears this inscription:—

A Tribute of Respect

Presented by the Citizens of Syracuse,

to the

Honorable Joshua Forman,
Founder of that Village.

SYRACUSE

1831.

At the ceremony of presenting the plate, mutual addresses were delivered; on the one hand, highly expressive of the affection and regard of a whole community, to a distinguished individual, who had toiled and exhausted his more vigorous energies for their welfare; and on the other, the acknowledgement of past favors at the hands of his fellow citizens and coadjutors, thankful that he had been the humble instrument of contributing to their prosperity, hoping that the bright visions of the future importance of Syracuse, which he had so long entertained, might be realized, he bade her citizens an affectionate farewell.

* Note.—There are also six silver goblets.

On his return to his home in North Carolina, Judge Forman took with him this token of the gratitude of his fellow-citizens, and it remained with him till the year 1845, when he presented it to his daughter, the lady of Gen. E. W. Leavenworth, of Syracuse, then on a visit to her father, who was in feeble health, remarking that it constituted a part of the history of Syracuse, and that after his death there it should remain.

While his health permitted, Judge Forman's business was principally that of making sales of the lands he had purchased in North Carolina.

In 1846 this venerable man revisited his former friends and acquaintances of his earlier years, and found in each full heart an honest welcome. To all it was apparent that the advances of time had made sad inroads upon his physical and mental powers. Seventy winters had shed their snows upon his devoted head. He had heard much of the growth and prosperity of his cherished city, and of his beloved Onondaga. He had fixed his heart upon again treading the soil of his revered county. He had earnestly desired to return to the land of his fathers, before his course on earth should be closed, to witness the result of those wonderful improvements in the accomplishment of which he had taken so deep an interest, and so active a part, and to see the fulfillment of those predictions which had sometimes acquired for him the name of a visionary projector and enthusiast, and once again for the last time to behold in the body, the few surviving friends of his earlier years. He could not bid adieu to the world in peace, till this last and greatest of his earthly wishes should be gratified.

On this occasion a public dinner was tendered to him, by P. N. Rust, Esq., of the Syracuse House. A large number of the most distinguished gentlemen of the county were present, together with the few gray-headed pioneers, who still lingered in the land. Nearly all the company were the personal friends of Judge Forman, many of them having been sharers or attentive observers of his early and patriotic public efforts, for the social, mental and moral improvement of this county. Few indeed are the instances, where an individual, mantled in the hoary locks of age, after an absence of twenty years, returns to the scenes of his primitive usefulness, with so many demonstrations on the part of friends and former neighbors, of joy and thankfulness, as in the one before us. It was also a season of peculiar gratification to him. Here he beheld the results of his labors in early active manhood. Here he beheld the progress of a thriving town founded by his fostering hand. Here he received the warm greetings of the friends of his early life, and here he met with them to bid them a kind, affectionate and last adieu.

Moses D. Burnet, Esq., presided on this very interesting occasion. A formal address of congratulation, on account of the great success of his early labors, and the remarkable fulfillment of his hopes and predictions, was made by the Hon. Harvey Baldwin, which was replied to, in behalf of Judge Forman, (he being then unable to articulate distinctly, on account of a paralytic shock,) by his son-in-law, E. W. Leavenworth, Esq.

Gen. Amos P. Granger, Hon. George Geddes, Lewis H. Redfield, Esq., and several other gentlemen of note, addressed the party in a very felicitous manner. The proceedings of this very interesting meeting may be found in the Onondaga Democrat of the 3d of Oct., 1846, and other city papers of that date.

From Syracuse, Judge Forman retired to his mountain home, in the milder climes of the sunny South, carrying with him the most vivid recollections of the kindness and hospitality of his friends; looking back upon a well spent life, much of which was devoted to the service of his country, without regret; and forward, without a fear to the hour when he will be called away from the scenes of society and earth.

Judge Forman is still living, (1848,) at his home in North Carolina, having bid adieu to the cares and business occupations of life.

NOTE.—He died at the village of Rutherfordton, on the 4th of Aug., 1848. His remains were removed from Rutherfordton, at the request of his daughter Mrs. E. W. Leavenworth, and now repose beneath the shades of the beautiful Rural Cemetery at Syracuse.

The character of this distinguished man may be summed up in a very few words. His mind was of no ordinary cast, and whether we view him as a fellow-citizen, a neighbor, a legislator, a jurist, a judge, or as a man, we find nothing that we cannot respect and admire. Full of life and energy himself, he infused with uncommon facility the same spirit into others, and wherever he was found, in him was the master spirit of every plan. He possessed a mind of uncommon activity, never wearying with the multiplicity of his labors and cares; it was stored with an unusual variety of knowledge, extending far beyond the boundaries of his professional pursuits, and he possessed a rare felicity in the communication of this knowledge to others. This fund of solid and general information upon every variety of topic, and his forcible and happy manner of communication, joined with the most social and cheerful disposition, rendered him on all occasions a most agreeable and interesting gentleman in conversation, and the delight of every circle in which he moved. He greatly excelled in the clear perceptions of the results of proposed measures of public improvement, and in a capacity to present them forcibly to others, carrying along with him individuals, communities and public assemblies, by his easy flowing language, and a manner at once most clear, captivating and persuasive. His whole life was characterized by the most public spirited efforts for the general good, and the most disinterested benevolence—always comparatively forgetful of his own private interest, in his zeal for the accomplishment of works of public utility. Through the long period of his stirring and eventful life, he sustained a character without stain and without reproach, and now, standing on the borders of the grave, is most justly entitled to the admiration and gratitude of his countrymen.

It was the happiness of the author in his youthful days, to spend several months in the family of Judge Forman, at Onondaga Hollow, and he takes pleasure in this opportunity of testifying to his domestic virtues and private worth.

For a brief genealogical sketch of the family of Deacon Joseph Forman, see Appendix, letter (J.)

For a fuller and more detailed account of Judge Forman's relations to the Erie Canal, see Dr. Hosack's life of DeWitt Clinton, and for his relations to the City of Syracuse, see Clark's Onondaga,—art. "Syracuse."

The Hon. James Geddes was the neighbor and friend of Judge Forman, and in all their long-continued efforts for the construction of the Erie canal, they were associates and co-laborers. I therefore take the liberty of giving a mere outline of his valuable and honorable life, for which I am also indebted to Clark's Onondaga, vol. 2, p. 45 to 50 inclusive. †

I also insert in a portion of the edition, a very life-like engraving of him, furnished at my request by his son, the Hon. George Geddes, who lives four miles west of the city of Syracuse, upon the fine farm of four hundred acres, a portion of the land purchased by his father of the State in 1798 :—

James Geddes was born on the 22d day of July, 1763, near Carlisle, in the State of Pennsylvania. His father and mother were both descended from Scotch families, and the first accents of his infant lips were uttered in broad Scotch. his children all the advantages of education that the country then afforded ; and every means at the command of the subject of this memoir, was made the most of, in storing his mind with useful knowledge.

While a youth, following the plow, he carried in his pocket a book ; and when his team stopped to rest, he perused its contents. In after life he frequently observed that his reading in the field was of great advantage to him, as he had full time to digest all that he read while holding the plow, and later in life could draw from these stores treasured up in his juvenile years, with pleasure and profit. He studied mathematics under charge of a Mr. Oliver, who was a thoroughly educated man. Languages he studied without masters, and he became a belle lettres scholar of the first order. In fact, few men ever acquire a knowledge of the English language that equaled his.

At an early age he visited the State of Kentucky. It was then necessary to cross the Alleghany mountains in large companies, for protection against the Indians ; and unburied human bones were seen at various places along the path they followed.

In Kentucky slavery had already established itself, and having an insuperable repugnance to that institution, he determined not to locate himself where it appeared that this evil was long to exist. From the time of arriving at his majority until the age of thirty, he employed himself in teaching school, traveling and improving his mind.

In the year 1793, the fame of the salt springs induced him to visit the county of Onondaga, (then Herkimer). So well was he pleased with the prospects this region offered, that he returned home and organized a company for the manufacture of salt ; and the next year, 1794, came by the way of Seneca Lake, with the necessary kettles, and early in the spring commenced the manufacture of salt, at the place now known as the village of Geddes. He lived there four years. In 1798 he moved to lands he had purchased of the State, in the present town of Camillus, where he lived the residue of his life.

In May, 1799, he married Miss Lucy Jerome, daughter of Timothy Jerome, Esq., of the town of Fabius.

Soon after becoming a citizen of this county, the public demanded his services, and he filled most if not all the important stations in his town at various times. He was appointed a Justice of the Peace in 1800, by the Council of Appointment. In 1804 he was elected a member of the Legislature.

Soon after his coming to this country, he was employed by the Surveyor-General, as one of his assistants, and he devoted himself to the profession of surveying and engineering, until age disqualified him from the fatigue of outdoor labors. His maps, plots and field books, deposited in the Surveyor-General's office, show him to be a man of great accuracy, and his accompanying remarks, the sagacity and penetration of his mind.

It was as an engineer that he became most known to the public, and it was as such that he did the State most service. The project of connecting the waters of Lake Erie with the Hudson River became an important one. Mr. Weston, a celebrated engineer from England, had examined the Oswego river, and other water courses, with a view to improving their navigation ; and among men of enlarged views the scheme became an engrossing topic. Mr. Geddes, at an early period, enlisted in the matter, and commenced with ardor the gathering of facts. In 1804 the Surveyor-General said to him, that Gouverneur Morris had mentioned to him the project of "tapping Lake Erie." The Surveyor-General considered this "a romantic thing," but not so the man to whom he communicated the crude, undigested thought. He knew that Mr. Weston had reported the Oswego river, from the Falls to Lake Ontario, as "hardly susceptible of improvement, by means of canaling," and if there was a way that the waters of the upper lakes could be led across the country without going down to the level of Ontario, and then rising to the summit again at Rome, that vast results must grow from it, and at once his untiring industry and energy was put in requisition. Maps were examined, surveyors were enquired of, and every means within his reach resorted to, to ascertain the topography of the country through which since has been constructed the Erie canal.

In 1807 Judge Joshua Forman was elected to the Legislature from this county, upon the express understanding that he would try to procure the appropriation of money to make examinations of the country. No man could have been better qualified than was Judge Forman to succeed. A man of eloquence, ardent, and peculiarly calculated to make men think as he himself thought upon any subject, he did succeed, and as was understood, the Surveyor-General, who had the selection of the man to make the surveys, (if he did not himself do it,) appointed Mr. Geddes. He "entered with enthusiasm upon the task assigned him by the Surveyor-General," and made surveys, not only of the Onondaga and Oswego rivers, and around the Falls of Niagara, but he reported a route, which was, in the language of the Surveyor-General, in his letter to Mr. Darley, of February 25, 1822, "almost precisely in the line which, after repeated elaborate and expensive examinations, has been finally adopted."

To quote further from Mr. DeWitt's letter, "the favorable light in which the report of this year's work presented the projected enterprise, after encountering prejudices from different sources, and oppositions made for various reasons, induced the Legislature in 1810, to organize a Board of Commissioners, with powers and means to prosecute the business."

This survey furnished the necessary information to justify prudent men to commit themselves in favor of a canal; and Mr. Clinton, grasping with his powerful intellect at once the vast advantages of the scheme, embarked in it with uncompromising zeal, and by his elevated position in the State, was enabled to render such assistance as ensured success.

After the war with England was ended, the Canal Commissioners sent to that country to secure the services of Mr. Weston, or some other engineer of reputation, to take charge of and lay out the canals, but they failed entirely, and it became necessary to rely upon their own inexperienced countrymen. In 1816, they appointed five principal engineers, placing Mr. Geddes at the head of the list, who throughout the progress of the work, maintained a high standing as a civil engineer, and whose labors and opinions were most favorably estimated by the Canal Commissioners, as their reports in various instances will show.

In 1822 the State authorities of Ohio applied to Governor Clinton to select a proper person to make the necessary explorations for their canal from the Ohio river to Lake Erie; and he, in the most flattering manner, recommended Mr. Geddes as the most competent man in the service of the State. Mr. Geddes accepted proposals from Ohio, and assumed the responsibility of Chief Engineer of the Ohio Canal. This duty he discharged to the perfect satisfaction of the authorities of the State of Ohio.

In 1827 Mr. Geddes was employed by the general government, (associated with Mr. Roberts), in the location of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal. In 1828 he was engaged in locating the Pennsylvania canals, and in the same year he was appointed by the general government to examine the country in reference to the connection of the waters of the Tennessee and Altamaha rivers, in the States of Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. This appointment he declined, on account of distance from home, and his advanced age.

In 1809 Mr. Geddes was appointed an Associate Justice, and in 1812, a Judge of Onondaga County Common Pleas. In 1813, he was elected a member of the 13th Congress, and in 1821 he was again elected a member of the Legislature of this State. He was elected to Congress by the Federal party, but belonged to that branch of the party who favored the vigorous prosecution of the then existing war, and it is proper to say, that he voted for every appropriation that was made during his term, for carrying on the war with vigor.

The infirmities of age crept upon him apace, and during the last year of his life, his constitution gave way rapidly, and he closed his earthly career at his residence, in the town of Camillus, on the 10th of August, 1838, being a little more than seventy-five years of age. He was the father of seven children, only one of them surviving him—all the rest having died without issue. The Hon. George Geddes, of Fairmount, now a member of the Senate of this State, is the survivor.

Perhaps it is safe to say that no man who had been as much in public service and who had come in contact with so great and conflicting interests, represented by men so different in capacity and character, ever died, leaving fewer enemies. His reputation for integrity, probably was never questioned, even by those whose opinions differed from his own. To be just in all his ways, was apparently a part of his nature, and the least lack of moral integrity, once detected by him in a man, destroyed his confidence in that man forever. It was his good fortune to live to great age, and enjoy almost uninterrupted good health. All his time was most diligently improved; and such was the extent of his knowledge, that he was greatest in the estimation of those who saw him most, and who had the best means of observing him critically. Integrity, industry, perseverance and sound judgment, were prominent traits of his character.

Although a self-educated man, relying entirely on his own resources, without the aid of artificial helps, he became eminent in the profession of his adoption, and by his talents and zeal for the public welfare, secured for himself a reputation that might well be envied.

He early stood forth among the hardy and honorable pioneers of our county, as one of the main pillars of its support, and by his acts has largely contributed to its advancement and prosperity. His name will ever be associated with the noblest works of the age, and his fame will descend with admiration to those who shall succeed.

He was an iron manufacturer and merchant at Wolcott, in the county of Wayne, N. Y. He was a highly valuable citizen—active, enterprising, public spirited, and of the highest character. The primary cause of his death—though he survived for a number of years—was a very severe injury which he received from the upsetting of his carriage near Canadaigua and from being dragged quite a distance upon the highway. It greatly impaired his activity and usefulness and finally resulted in his death.

His father was a merchant at Great Barrington at the time of his birth, but within a year or two removed to Sheffield, Mass., where he remained until about 1825, when he removed to Binghamton, N. Y., still continuing in the same business, though largely interested in iron works, at Wolcott, N. Y. This led him to close his business at Binghamton, and remove to Wolcott, about 1835. Elisha remained with his father and early became a partner with his father in the business at Wolcott, which was largely carried on and with success until near the close of their lives. The family still reside at Wolcott.

 659. PHILIP REYNOLDS, b. February 18, 1867, at Hinesburgh.

Resided with his father till he was twenty-one, working on the farm summers, studying or teaching winters.

Entered Hinesburg Academy at seventeen. Taught school five winters from his eighteenth year. Entered the University of Vermont, at twenty-one. Was one of the founders of the Delta Psi Fraternity and a member of the Society for Religious Inquiry, and of the Phi Sigma Nu Society.

Having received a severe injury in his head he was advised to leave college and go south. He received a highly complimentary letter from the President, Worthington Smith, D. D., which was fully endorsed by Ex-Gov. William Slade.

He left in April 1852, near the close of his junior year and about the twentieth entered upon the duties of Principal of Bolivar Male and Female Academy, at Bolivar, Polk Co., Mo., in connection with Miss Mary E. Griggs, as Preceptress, who was previously in charge of the school. The institution was very prosperous. He remained there till 1855.

He was unable to conform his views to those of the majority of the trustees and patrons, in regard to affairs in Kansas. They had several of them voted at the election in Kansas, though living sixty miles from the border, and had actually elected one of the trustees to the Kansas Legislature. He therefore concluded to return east, although every inducement was held out to him to remain.

The institution ran rapidly down after he left and the town was badly wasted by the rebellion.

On his return, he was invited to take charge of the Hinesburg

Academy, which he did, just ten years after entering it as a student, in September 1855. At the end of his first year there, he unexpectedly received the degree of A. B. in course, from the trustees of the University of Vermont, and four years after, that of A. M.

At the end of five years he resigned against the wishes of the Trustees, and became Principal and proprietor of the Brattleboro Academy, at West Brattleboro, Vt., in 1860.

In 1859 he became one of the proprietors and editors of the Vermont School Journal and Family Visitor, and in 1860 he became sole proprietor and editor, the name having been abridged to the Vermont School Journal, with which he was connected until he entered the army in 1862. In the Spring of 1862, he was prostrated by an attack of erysipelas, and was obliged to disband his school, which he had changed to a select school of thirty scholars, young men and boys, whom he was fitting for business or for college. The whole were organized into a well-disciplined military company, from whose ranks several entered the army of the Union.

When partially recovered, he heard and responded to the call of Father Abraham, "for three hundred thousand more," and with one of his students, was the first to enlist under that call from Vermont, having yielded to a desire long felt. On May 24th, 1862, he became a private in the Ninth Vermont Volunteers, to serve as a soldier for the Union, at eleven dollars per month, in lieu of one hundred dollars per month as a teacher. He became First Sergeant of Co. K, July 5th, 1862; First Lieutenant Nov. 17, 1862, and Captain December 4, 1864.

He was appointed by Major-Gen. Dix, commanding department of Virginia and North Carolina, A. A. Inspector-Gen. of Wistar's Brigade, at Suffolk, Va. June 10, 1863, of the U. S. Forces at Yorktown, Gloucester, Fort Magruder and vicinity, July 9, 1863, to May 3, 1864, was confirmed by Maj. J. G. Foster, October 14, 1863, and reappointed by Maj. Gen. B. F. Butler, February 22, 1864, of Sec. Brig., Sec. Division, 18th A. C., May 3d, to June 10th 1864. Was in Officer's General Hospital, and on sick leave of absence till September, 1864. Provisional Brigade Defences of Bermuda Hundred, September 21, to December 4, 1864. Also A. A. Adj. General of the same command, from October 13, 1864, which held the line between the James and Appomattox rivers, three miles and covered the base of supplies for the armies of the Potomac and of the James. December 4, 1853, was transferred to the 2d Brig., 3d Div., 24th Army Corps of which he was made A. A. Adj't. General. This command held the line fronting Richmond, eight miles distant, but in sight of the State House, during the winter of 1864-5. April 3d, 1865, he commanded the skirmish line of Vermonters, which led the advance into that city. April 5th, he was appointed by Maj. Gen. Weitzel, Ast. Provost Marshall and assigned by the P. M. Gen'l Department of Virginia, to the head office at Richmond. On the restoration of order to that city, he was assigned to duty April 30th as A. A. Adj't General of the Department of the Appotomax embracing the five counties between the James and the Appotomax rivers, with headquarters at first at Manchester, then at Petersburg. This position he held till his discharge at Richmond, June 13th, 1865.

Returned home in June, 1865, the rebellion being closed, with thirty-two men of his company who left with him in 1862, the largest number of any company in the regiment, though his company entered the smallest by some twenty men."

From 1865 to 1868 he was principal of the Hinesburgh Academy; from then till 1870, of New Haven Academy. In 1869 the latter institution was re-chartered as Beeman Academy, and in 1870 it was reorganized, and a fund of eleven thousand dollars secured towards support of instruction. The charter provides for a classical, a scientific, and a normal course, of three years. The chief work of the school is to prepare young men and women for higher institutions, and for teaching. He continues in charge of this school at the present time.

He was a member of Chitten Co. Teacher's Association from its organization in 1847, most of the time one of its active officers, and President from 1868 to 1870. Also, delegate from the same to the National Teacher's Association, at Trenton, N. J., in August, 1869. He has been a member of the State Teacher's Association since 1857, and is now Treasurer and Vice-President of the same. He is also a leading member of Otter Creek Valley Teacher's Association, and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Vermont Teacher's Club. In 1872 he was a member of the General Convention of Vermont Congregational body. He is also an active member of the Re-union Society of Vermont officers of the late war.

He died in the prime of his life and of his usefulness and was one of the most active, enterprising and valued citizens of Gloversville, where he had long resided. His life was a perfect and harmonious whole, and the one great trait underlying his whole character and to which all others were subservient, was his deep and unobtrusive piety.

In an editorial of one of the papers of Gloversville, published soon after his death, he is thus spoken of,

"In common with our readers, we are called upon to mourn the loss of one of our best citizens. We feel ourselves unable to approach a just tribute to his memory. It needs a pen more eloquent than ours, to perform the task. When young he united with the Presbyterian church at Kingsboro, and at the death of his father was chosen a ruling elder. After his removal here he was soon elected one of the trustees of the Presbyterian society in this village and soon after was chosen a ruling elder in the church.

In the duties and activities of christian life, he was one of the foremost in work but never pushing himself forward as "a man in authority."

As a citizen he was ever ready to foster and care for every improvement which would tend to enhance the charms, increase the value or augment the population of our village.

As a man he was honored and loved by all who knew him, and those who knew him best, loved him most and they feel most his loss. His death is a serious loss to the church, the community and the town.

One who had been his pastor for nine years, and for many more his friend and his correspondent, wrote as follows;

"Of all the men whom I have known intimately, I think Mr. Leaveworth the most perfect. I am grateful to God for having known him, and for the delightful hours of intercourse with him; thankful that I have known a character so symmetrical, in which was united so remarkably manly vigor, with delicacy and tenderness, and as the crown of all, religion in its noblest form."

 2. GEORGE BATEMAN DELANO, b. March 14, 1865.

Hon. Columbus Delano was born at Shortham, Vt., in the year 1810. At ten years of age he removed to Ohio, in the care of immediate relatives, who settled in the county of Knox. His boyhood was there passed in the lighter occupations of the farm, joined to habits of persistent devotion to study. He pursued his elementary education at such schools as were then available, learning the latin language with but little aid from classical teachers. His historical reading at the age of eighteen was extensive. With a seriousness becoming his disposition rather than his years, he began thus early to consider how he should make his way in the world, and what pathway was to lead him up from obscurity to a useful position in life. Without the aid of influential friends, but cheered by the encouraging advice of those who knew and loved him, and with such assistance as they could render, he determined to undertake the study of law.

In 1830 he entered the office of Hosmer Curtis, Esq., then a noted special pleader, practicing at Mt. Vernon, as a student. After three years of the most diligent preparation, he was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of Ohio in 1833, and commenced practice at Mt. Vernon at the age of twenty-two.

Though no extraordinary display of precocious talent had been exhibited, to justify the expectation that he would triumph suddenly over the formidable obstacles in the way of the young attorney, his success was immediate. He had the unusual fortune in the first year of his practice, to be employed as junior counsel in a local suit, involving important legal questions, and the title to a considerable estate. Having been left by an accident to the sole management of the case through the trial, or the alternative of seeking a continuance, which was denied him, he was forced to enter alone upon the argument and trial against able and experienced opponents, and was triumphantly successful. He thus gained a reputation the immediate effect of which was his election to the office of prosecuting attorney for the State, in a county adverse to his political associations and views. He had, from the first, been a supporter of Mr. Adams's administration. After three years service as prosecuting attorney, he was re-elected, but within a few months, resigned the trust, which interfered with his more extensive civil practice. His constant attention upon the courts, from this time for a period of fifteen years, his thoroughness and integrity as a lawyer, and his uniform success as an advocate, met with ample reward. And, although more indifferent than many others to the gains of his profession, his reputation grew, pari passu, with his estate. The germs of a modest and prudent avarice had not been foreign to his breast. But his aims were not less to do some good, to make society and posterity his debtors, to be a benefactor in his place and sphere, than to cultivate and improve his own mind, to acquire a just relish for excellence, and to become independent and possess himself of those accomplishments which become a lofty and amiable character. His professional business, however important, was not allowed to exclude him from society, nor to cause him to neglect the christian duties of his position. As a member of the Episcopal church he has ever taken an active interest in its prosperity, zealously endeavoring to promote its welfare and elucidate its faith. For many years he was the careful and beneficent superintendent of its sabbath schools.

In the political issues of the past, he was actively opposed to slavery and to the democratic policy. Seeking no office for himself, he was still the frequent exponent of the whigs in the local contests of his vicinity. Surrounded by a cordon of democratic constituencies, largely in the minority in his congressional district, there seemed to be but little hope for his popular preferment. But having unexpectedly been placed in nomination for congress in 1841, he was elected by a majority of twelve votes over his competitor, Hon. Caleb J. McNulty, a democratic politician of extensive popularity, resources and power. To illustrate the significance of this triumph, it is only necessary to state that the democratic candidate for governor carried the district, at the same election by a majority of more than six hundred votes.

On the first of December 1845, Mr. Delano took his seat as a member of the 39th congress. This may be termed one of the epochs in the congressional history of the country. Contemporaneous with Mr. Polk's administration of the Presidency, it comprised statesmen of great experience and great ability. The disputed policy of war and conquest of Oregon and Mexico, and the extension of slavery, were the unsettled questions of that day, which darkened the door of the future, and lengthened their evil shadows into the coming years. On the Oregon question Mr. Delano spoke at length, advocating the claims of the United States to the farthest northern boundary, departing from the views of many of his colleagues, and opposed to the policy which eventually prevailed.

On the 11th of May, 1846, he voted with John Quincy Adams and twelve others, against the famous and long-controverted declaration that "war exists by the act of Mexico," and subsequently he defended his vote, and the twelve, in his speech in the House, on the thirteenth of May following.

Chosen as the exponent of this Spartan band of dissenters, who alone had the courage to vote against the false declaration, he rose to the full majesty of the occasion, answering the hopes and expectations of his colleagues, not only in their vindication, but in a most striking and aggressive attack on the administration. Of this speech much was said and written at the time, both in favor and against it. Its truths were not gainsaid, but it proved to be a subject of general attack, and may be considered in the politician's view, as impolitic. It served, however, the purpose of reinforcing the anti-slavery and free-soil parties and damaged both the whigs and democrats. The occasion was one which seemed to call forth the devices of the dodger, if such arts can be justified in legislation, but to these devices Mr. Delano scorned to resort. The speech was reckoned of such great significance, that Mr. Douglass of Illinois, Mr. Thurman, of Ohio, Mr. Chipman, of Missouri, and Mr. Tibbals, of Kentucky, continued the debate, and gave themselves serious concern to reply to it. Mr. Adams was seated near to the Speaker throughout its delivery, and at the conclusion, in admiration of its completeness, declared that, "There shouldn't be a 't' crossed, nor an 'i' dotted!"

Mr. Delano retired at the close of this Congress. His district having been changed by adverse party legislation, he was not a candidate for re-election. His name was brought before the Whig State Convention, at Columbus, on the 22d of February, 1848, for nomination as Governor of Ohio, and though he had voted in Congress to supply the army, and to reinforce the army in Mexico, his speech against the declaration contributed to place him, in the minds of some, with the opposition to the war. He was defeated in the convention by two votes. In the following national campaign he supported Gen. Taylor for the presidency.

Having retired wholly from the Bar, he removed with his family in 1850, to New York City, and became a member of the commercial firm of Delano, Dunlevy & Co. with a branch at Cincinnati, Ohio. After five years of successful business in New York, he withdrew from the firm and in 1857, returned to his home in Ohio, and engaged in general business and agriculture, as farmer.

His extensive lands were placed under a higher state of cultivation and were supplied with valuable and profitable breeds of stock. Exempt from onerous public duties, his leisure for a time was given to his family, to society, and to his library.

Unlike many lawyers, he had not found it difficult to withdraw from the practice of law. How much virtuous earnestness is intended in the assurance that they are attached to the profession for its own sake? And to what purpose? Special pleading, wrangling at courts, quibbling, suppressing scorn for villainous attorneys, temporizing with convenient vices, mingling with the administration of justice! To what end? For some thousands yearly, and the vanities and accommodations of upper life. With better views and a better taste than to follow this irksome occupation, he chose a position of more consequence; one involving the destination to which he was entitled, as well as the devotion of his zeal for liberty and his liberal and just sentiments of the real interests of mankind to the public service.

In 1860, he was chosen a delegate to the Chicago Convention which nominated Mr. Lincoln to the presidency. In 1861, he was appointed commissary general of the State of Ohio, doing active service until the general government made full provision for the volunteers. In 1862, the republicans of the Ohio Legislature, ballotted in conference, for United States Senator and he again wanted but two votes of a nomination. In 1863, he was elected to the Ohio house of representatives, at Columbus, serving as chairman of the judiciary committee. His defense of the act providing for soldiers voting in the field and which secured that measure, was one of the most important of the session. In 1864, he was again chosen to the national convention, at Baltimore, and was chairman of the Ohio delegation which voted for the renomination of Mr. Lincoln.

In the same year he was elected to the 39th congress and was appointed chairman of the committee of claims. His conduct on this important committee, met with universal approval. Sufficient evidence of this is found in the fact that every congressional report made from his committee, was adopted by the house. He was reelected to the 40th congress, and served on the committee of foreign affairs, but declined to be a candidate for reelection in his district.

As a legislator, he took a frequent part in the debates of the house. He was opposed to the policy of free trade and advocated a tariff for revenue with incidental protection. He was strongly opposed to the extravagant claims of railroad companies for land grants and government subsidies. From the committee of foreign relations, he opposed in debate the appropriation for the purchase of the Russian territory of Alaska. His views were regarded as most important on questions of the tariff, of excise taxes and the public debt. To his speech of the 24th of July, 1866, was given the credit of carrying the tariff bill of that session, against what had been considered to be the sense of the house.

It is no exaggeration to say that the solid matter of his speech, the earnestness of his manner and the judicious use of the ear of the house "not abusing it" made him more certain of attention, and surer to carry his views than more frequent debaters. But his command over his audience was not from any wit that sparkled, nor lively sallies of the imagination, nor by impassioned or pathetic appeals, nor even by rare powers of vehement declamation, though that was a characteristic, but it was from a combination of most lucid statement, aptness of argument and of familiar illustration, frequently a forcible exposure of the adversary, mingled with a sparing use of sarcasm, in the tones of a voice rich, full and unhesitating.

At the close of his third term in congress Mr. Delano was appointed commissioner of internal revenue and continued to discharge the duties of that most exacting and laborious office till November, 1870, when he was appointed secretary of the interior, in the cabinet of the present administration of the government.

Of his more recent public acts and those of to-day, it is only proper that the public voice, not the partial chronicler should speak.

As commissioner of internal revenue it is sufficient to his credit, as a public officer, that he collected the taxes, paid the revenue into the treasury, destroyed the whiskey ring and silenced public complaint. This achievement alone, ought to be deemed enough to establish the fame and character of a public man. It is what others equally honest in their purposes, had failed to do and indeed, it is all that Alexander Hamilton did to send down his great name to be praised by posterity.

The present sketch of Mr. Delano's services may be closed with the remark that he has been found ever equal to the largest questions, and not impatient of the most ordinary; that he never was deficient in political knowledge required by the occasion, whether the subject was that of foreign or domestic policy, indian civilization and wars, economical and financial science, the bearing of constitutional law, or claims against the treasury, for he possesses in a large degree, the lawyers' faculty of gaining information for every emergency and of using it with the authority and confidence of a master.

There is no perceptible line of manners dividing his public and private life. The same courteous and thoughtful attention given to the councils of great men, is accorded as promptly by him to the interests of the humblest person. In his own family circle, a peculiarly gifted and happy one, there are vases but no jars. It is a Mansion of rest without the probationary state.

FIRST CIRCULAR.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., 1865.

DEAR SIR:—About twenty-five years since I made a Genealogical Tree of the Leavenworths, which was lithographed, and to some extent distributed to the different branches of the family.

That Tree was made without as full reference to authentic data as should have been had, and there are in it a number of important inaccuracies and some omissions. Further investigations will no doubt reveal still more.

I now propose to revise that work, to supply its omissions, correct its errors, bring the different families down to the present time, and enlarge its plan. I desire the aid of every member of the family who can furnish any information. I wish to include in the work, every person of the name of Leavenworth, both male and female, living or dead, the residence and profession of every person who has married into that family, male or female. And I intend, as far as may be, to note the date and place of the birth, marriage and death of each one, their occupation or profession, and their residence or residences at different periods.

I would also include brief notices of any of the more prominent members of the family, and hope their descendants and friends will furnish me with such incidents, remarks and suggestions, as they may think proper. Entire accuracy is most desirable, and where it can be had should be. Town, County, Church and Probate records furnish many facts with accuracy, and grave stones and family Bibles may often be consulted with great benefit. When a person cannot furnish information HIMSELF, a reference to the place where, or the person from whom it can be obtained is very desirable.

I hope and believe that every person who receives a copy of this circular will, without unnecessary delay, give me all the information above requested, tracing back his ancestors as far as may be possible, and all collateral branches, and all descendants—giving me in regard to each individual, the date and place of his or her birth, death, marriage and to whom, with residence and profession, and any interesting facts. To each person contributing information I shall be happy to present one or more copies of the Genealogy, when finished. I hope to complete the work during the present year, which makes it very desirable that information should be furnished as early as possible.

I am, most Respectfully Yours,

E. W. LEAVENWORTH.

SECOND CIRCULAR.

"B."

SYRACUSE, N. Y., 187 .

DEAR SIR:—I have been engaged for the past five years in issuing the circular on the next page "A." I have prosecuted my inquiries with all the diligence which multiplied public and private duties would permit.

- 1st. I have clearly ascertained our first common ancestor in this country.
 - 2d. I have been easily able to trace all the families back to our common source—Thomas Leavenworth, of Woodbury, who died in 1683.
 - 3d. I find no person of the name, who is not descended from the said Thomas L.
 - 4th. I have obtained from abroad the Coat of Arms of the family, no doubt that of Sir Lewis Leavenworth, who lived in the time of Cromwell, and who is mentioned in Russell's Lives of Eccentric Characters. Vol. 1, p. 90, Note B.
 - 5th. I have traced out nearly every family in the Union,—from the Atlantic to the Pacific,—and in most cases with a large portion of the facts sought for.
 - 6th. I hope to have all the facts attainable, gathered in the course of the coming year, and then put them into form and publish them at once in a book.
 - 7th. I hope every person who may receive a copy of these circulars, will give them early attention, and furnish all the facts within their reach.
- The labor of searching out all the families, and collecting all the desirable statistics, is immense, and in many cases the facts are unattainable. But the work will be as perfect as it is possible for me to make it, without an expenditure of time and an amount of travel which it is impossible for me to bestow upon the subject. But I shall accomplish all within my reach, and bring the work to an early close.

E. W. LEAVENWORTH.

"A." Meaning the preceding page.

NOTE B.—There is an error of a century in the time when Sir Lewis lived in London, which was about 1750. This error arose from writing from my recollection, instead of referring to the work. Having subsequently found the Coat of Arms of the family in this country, I omit that obtained from abroad.

"C."

DISCONNECTED NAMES.

A small number of persons have been found whose relation to the family I have been unable to ascertain. There is no doubt of their connection with it, and yet the most diligent enquiries which I have been able to make have not enabled me to attach them to any family of the name. They are as follows:

First. Lemira Leavenworth, of Woodbury, was married in September, 1793, to Truman Stiles, the son of Isaac Stiles, and had the following children: Sherman, Robert, Erastus, Hancey, Harriet L. and Ann S. Hancey d. unm. Harriet m. Abraham Bassett, and Ann S. m. Joel Loch, who was born at Falmouth, Maine.— Cothren's Woodbury, p. 701, of Vol. 1st.

Second. John Leavenworth was the father of the said Lemira. His granddaughter, Mrs. Joel Loch, is now (1871) living at Watertown, Ct. He came from Stratford. He was a miller by occupation, and during the Revolution lived at White Oak, in the town of Southbury, Ct. When the French troops passed through, he furnished them with wheat and corn, butter and pork, gratuitously. He was well acquainted with Gideon and Ebenezer Leavenworth, who were his near relations. He had five children, Sherman, Grace, Lemira, Dannie and Levina. Grace m. Enoch Johnson in 1794, and had two children, Seymour and Marshall. Sherman m. Esther Gunn and had a son, William. Truman Stiles m. Lemira, and had the first five children above mentioned, (No 1.) When she died, he married her sister, Dannie, by whom he had one child, Ann Sennitt, now Mrs. Loch. Sherman, or his son William, or both, removed to Monticello, N. Y., and were back at Southbury, in 1823, on a visit. All of Lemira's children are dead. Lemira died in 1857. The above facts in regard to the said John and his family, were obtained from Mrs. Loch. It will be observed that Mrs. Loch and Mr. Cothren do not agree in one point. Cothren says that Truman Stiles

m. Levina, such is probably the record. Mrs. Loch says he married Lemira, and it would seem that she ought to know.

Third. Upon the Town Records of the town of Huntington, on page 139, is an entry that on the 23d day of May, 1833, Munson Pearce, of Newtown, and Cornelia Leavenworth, of Huntington, were legally joined in marriage. The said Cornelia does not appear in any of the families which I have been able to find, nor does any one at Huntington seem to be able to call her to mind.

Fourth. At page 806, of the 1st vol. of Cothren's Woodbury, appear the names of David and Alma Leavenworth. David, sometimes called Marcus, was the illegitimate son of Ada Nettleton, of Woodbury, and had no claim to the name of Leavenworth. Alma is his widow. They had one child, Arvesta, who is also dead.

Fifth. The following is taken from the Genealogy of the Peck family: Henry Peck, the son of Ephraim P., first of Milford, then of Newtown, was b. Ap. 14, 1719, and died at Newtown, July 23, 1760. His will is recorded at Danbury, book 7, page 1. He was twice married. He m. (1st) Ann Smith, Dec. 23, 1755. (2d.) Hannah Leavenworth, Aug. 6, 1765. Children: 1. Salmon, b. May 10th, 1758; 2. Lemuel b. April 30th, 1760. He was twice married. His first wife was Amy Peck, daughter of Jabez Peck. His second wife was Mary Griffin. He lived in Newtown, where he died in 1839, leaving no issue. 3. Mercy, b. August 10th, 1767, m. Levi Peck; 4. Hannah, b. April 6, 1770, m. Daniel Peck; 5. Andrew, b. May 21, 1773; 6. Samuel, b. July 2, 1775. This Hannah L. m. in 1765, could not have been the d. of John of Stratford, for several reasons, and Hannah, the d. of his brother, Dr. Thomas, m. Nicholas Moss. She could have been the d. of no person but of one of the eight sons of Dr. Thomas. She does not appear in any one of the families. But there is no other known person of whom she could have been the daughter, unless it can be supposed that John of Stratford—the brother of Dr. Thomas actually had a son, Ebenezer, who lived to man's estate—married and had children, which does not seem probable. Hannah L., the d. of Dr. Thomas, who m. Nicholas Moss, was a widow before 1765, but she married (2d) the Rev. Mr. Dickerman. In 1765 her name was Moss or Dickerman. Vide No. 14, Hannah L.

DEAR SIR:—Lawrence Hammond, was of Charlestown, freeman, 1666, was Captain in the Militia and a representative to the General Court. He was admitted to the Ancient and Hon. Artillery Company in 1666, and died at Boston, July 29th, 1699. Francis Burroughs was a bookseller, in Boston, in 1685, Adm. to the Art Co. in 1686. His will was proved Dec. 11, 1713. Benjamin Bullivant, was a physician in Boston, in 1685. He was Gov. Andros' Attorney General. He returned to England, and was living in Northampton in 1711. Both Burroughs and Bullivant are mentioned in John Danton's letters from New England. In 1685, Governor Bradstreet resided in Boston, and James Russell, the assistant, lived in Charlestown.

We should be very happy to receive any communication from you for the Register, even if it be to correct our mistakes, or, rather I should say, we are very anxious to have our errors corrected. I enclose one of our blanks which we are sending to members, of which you are one, whose personal record is not full in our archives. Please fill it up at your convenience, and return it.

LETTER OF CHARLES J. HOADLEY, STATE LIBRARIAN.

(Great Seal of the State.)

STATE LIBRARY OF CONNECTICUT,
HARTFORD, August 17th, 1864. }

Hon. E. W. LEAVENWORTH:

Dear Sir,—I am very little of a Genealogist, and can add nothing to the account given of the family by Cothren and Bronson. I have the custody of a mass of the old Colonial documents, and one volume of early Probate records of Connecticut. Among the former, are two bonds of Grace Leavenworth, of Woodbury, widow, dated the same day, i. e. June 11, 1684, one to George Musgrave, of London, Skinner,—the other to Mary Gawthorne, of London, widow. There was a seal attached to her name on both bonds, with a coat of arms, but both these seals were stolen from the documents since 1842, and before 1856. Upon one of the bonds (both of which seem to have been executed in Boston,) the name of John Leavenworth appears as a witness. I send you a fac simile of both the autographs.

Cothren and Bronson are both living—the former in Woodbury—the latter in New Haven. Mr. P. M. Trowbridge compiled the genealogical part of both their histories, I believe, but I do not know his residence, and have never seen him to my knowledge. With both the other gentlemen I am acquainted.

Yours, Respectfully,

CHARLES J. HOADLEY.

PROFESSOR JAMES HALL'S LETTER.

ALBANY, Feb. 24th, 1874.

HON. E. W. LEAVENWORTH:

My Dear Sir:—I have received your favor of the 23d. I can readily give you the information you desire. When you were elected Secretary of State, or at least, when I became acquainted with you, I had already given five years of my life to the work for which I had received no compensation from the State. My services were coming to a close, because I had spent nearly everything I possessed in carrying on the work, previously and during these five years I had gone on, making my collections of fossils throughout the State and beyond its limits, paying assistants and draughtsmen, and incurring other expenses. I had sold nearly everything in the shape of property, and I had before been possessed of a considerable amount, and I had mortgaged the last, the place on which I was then and still am living. Under these circumstances, it seemed about time that my services to New York should come to a close.

I had accepted the offer of a position in the Geological Survey of Canada, and had returned to Albany, to close my affairs here before removing to Montreal, where I had left directions that a house should be rented for me.

You can readily find this statement to be true, I think, so far as data can be had from Legislative documents, but it will be seen that money due me in 1850 for services of 1849, was not paid till 1851, or something of this kind. I know it remained due for more than a year before being paid.

Had your action in 1855 been deferred for two or three months longer, the New York Paleontology would have been ended with Vol. II, and I should long since have been a subject of Queen Victoria, and would now have been the Government Geologist of the Dominion, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Your action extended the time, and was the means of completing Vols. III and IV, and the MS. for Vol. V, which was deposited with Dr. Woolworth, in 1866.

The old contract for engraving became profitless from increase of prices during the war, and owing to this fact no progress was made for several years. In fact, it was only in December, 1871, that the contract was modified so that Mr. Van Benthuyssen was willing to go on at all.

I have to-day lettered plates 77 and 78 of Lithographed plates for Vol. V, and have drawings ready for more than 100 plates beyond.

The Appropriation bill has come from the House with everything relating to the Paleontology left out, and to-morrow I go before the Finance Committee of the Senate, to learn what they will do.

My health is not good, my nervous energies are prostrated. I am sleepless and wretched, and I do not think I shall contend very hard against closing the work at an early day. I have been working hard for forty years, and the nervous force expended on my scientific investigations has been less than half what I have wasted in contending for the privilege of working.

I am indebted to you for a few quiet years, but some one more wise than his generation was generally found to raise his voice in the Legislature and propose stopping the work, and then I must see Committees and lobby with the Legislature. I have wasted in this way much time and energy. I have made some pleasant acquaintances, and have learned a little of human nature.

My duties at the Museum these last years have been a severe tax upon me in every way, and have caused too much neglect of my scientific investigations. In trying to do both, I have broken down my strength, and after all this, a few years of neglect or bad administration of the affairs of the Museum may undo all I have done, while had I made and published the results of scientific investigation, that would have been a permanent contribution to knowledge which nothing could undo.

I am now at that time of life, and in a condition of health, to need quiet and relief from petty duties while I finish the work, for I am sure no one will take it up if I leave it unfinished. I have every reason to believe that Mr. Wood* is favorably disposed towards the work, but the tendency is to reduce appropriations, and this work is a luxury appreciated by fewer persons than are some other things for which the State makes appropriations.

Should I not have the pleasure of seeing you here soon, I shall send you for examination, a set of the plates that are finished, which I have had set up to show the Committee the progress of the work.

I am, very sincerely, your obedient servant,

JAMES HALL.

ERRATA AND ADDENDA.

I confess myself greatly surprised and mortified by the number of errata which a very careful review of my whole work has brought to light. Some have arisen from errors in the original manuscript, far more from carelessness in correcting proofs and not a few from the neglect of the printers.

My mortification would be greater than it is, had I not discovered—greatly to my surprise—many more errors per page in the only two Genealogies which I have critically examined, and that none of them are referred to in the errata of the respective works. And yet these works were compiled with unusual labor and care.

Its length too has been materially increased by additions and explanations, and also by correction of errors not very material.

I hope the great body of errors are embraced below, and that all persons who take an interest in the work, will, pen in hand, proceed to correct them before giving it a farther examination. With all its errors and imperfections I now commit it to the hands of the family, most sincerely thankful and happy that its slow and tedious length has finally been drawn to a close this first day of May, 1874.

DEATH OF DOCTOR M. C. LEAVENWORTH.

It is with no ordinary emotions of sadness that we record the death of this worthy man and physician, which took place in the hospital at New Orleans, on the 20th of November last, in the 67th year of his age. The Doctor was attached to the Twelfth Regiment C. V., Col. Deming, as First Assistant Surgeon, and accompanied that regiment first to Ship Island, then to New Orleans, in Gen. Butler's expedition, where he was stationed at the time of his death. Up to a few days before his death his health had been uncommonly good, having never lost a day while attending to his professional duties. He often communicated with his relatives and friends at home, seemed in the best of spirits and having been used to the climate in early life, entertained few fears that stood in the way of his ultimate return. He was not, it seems, in Gen. Weitzel's expedition, having been appointed Superintendent of the Hospital for Contrabands, recently established, where he met his death.
